By Shirley Povich.

The President of the United States rose in his flag-festooned field box at Griffith Stadium yesterday, took a full wind-up, and opened the 1938 baseball season by heaving a crisp, low fast ball toward the diamond.

That virtually completed the good pitching for the day.

The pitching went sour almost immediately after it was transferred to the professional hurlers, and in a wild hitting spree the Nats slugged it out with the Philadelphia Athletics to win a 12-8 decision in a rain-spattered ball game

President Roosevelt's capable ceremonial pitch won him all the pitching honors, for the offerings of Wes Ferrell and three Philadelphia hurlers were pummeled for 32 hits. It was a strictly a fans' ball game with lusty extra-base blows landing against the fences and into the bleacher seats.

Divide 32 Hits.

Twenty-nine thousand customers, contemptuous of the drizzle that fell almost throughout the game, sat in on the sustained slugfest in which the Athletics and the Washington club divided 32 hits equally.

The opening-game show went on despite the sinister-looking clouds that cloaked the stadium from early afternoon. The President and his official White House party arrived on schedule, the United States Army Band tooted all the customary anthems, Old Glory shot up the flagstaff with distinguished hands at the ropes, and Vice President John Nance Garner led the parade, in company with Clark Griffith and the White House military and naval aides.

Only semiprotected from the rain, the President munched at his peanuts and stayed to the finish, taking evident delight in the sustained slugging of the two clubs and vigorously applauding First Baseman Henry John (Zeke) Bonura of the Nats.

Hit Into Bleachers.

He applauded Bonura because it was the large, boisterous Italian athlete who contributed the chief slugging feat of the day—a tremendous home run into the left field bleacher seats with two Nats on base in the sixth inning. But it was Vice President Garner who, above all others, took a personal interest in that home run.

The new Washington first baseman, in a pregame conversation with the Vice President had promised that a home run would be forthcoming from his bat yesterday. Invited to Mr. Garner's box before the start of hostilities, Bonura jokingly told the Vice President:

"I'll hit a special home run for you today."

And that home run that he did hit, brother, was no ordinary home run. It was hit full into the teeth of a drizzle and heavy atmosphere, and there was no doubt of its destination from the moment Bonura swung his bat against the ball. On

Failure to Pay Business Tax to Block Licenses

Report on District Revenue Bill Reveals Penalty for Ignoring Current Law.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington business men who failed or refused to pay the current business privilege tax will be denied a license to operate during the next fiscal year, a report on the 1939 revenue bill disclosed yesterday.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, filed the report although the Senate was not in session, and he said he would call it up at the first opportunity this week. It appeared doubtful, however, that the Senate will act before it disposes of the naval supply bill, upon which general debate begins today.

Despite the secrecy which attended approval of the tax bill by the Senate District Committee on Saturday, neither the text of the measure nor the report carried any hidden provisions so far as could be determined.

Senator King, in reporting the bill, estimated that it would raise a total of $5,200,000, or the same amount expected from the House bill before the income tax was stricken.

He arrived at this figure by fixing the net return from the business privilege tax at $2,000,000, or exactly the same amount anticipated from a graduated income levy. District officials have wavered in their estimates between

Coogan 'Bad Boy,' His Mother Says, Claiming Wealth

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP).—There are two reasons why Jackie Coogan, silent films star, has not come into any of the estimated $4,000,000 he had amassed, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, his mother, testified tearfully in a deposition hearing preparatory to trial of Jackie's suit for an accounting.

The first, she said, is that the law makes minors' earnings the property of their parents.

The second—and she broke down when she told this—was because "Jackie was a bad boy, a very, very bad 20-year-old boy" who "couldn't handle money;" whose father told him, "if you had money, you'd go completely haywire in two months."

Senate Is Given Billion-Dollar 'Big-Navy' Bill

Plan Grew 356 Million; Scott Asks Hull to Name Treaty Breakers.

By Sidney Olson.

The "big Navy" bill, which has been increased at the rate of $35,000,000 per week since its introduction in Congress January 28, yesterday was favorably reported by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. It called for an appropriation of $1,156,646,000 to give the United States "comparative security" from foreign aggression.

The bill, originally drafted for an $800,000,000 appropriation on the basis of the President's message seeking a 20 per cent fleet expansion, has grown steadily as legislators, studying "American vulnerability" and the dramatic course of foreign events, have determined to guard the Nation's coasts with the biggest Navy in American history.

The report on the bill came yesterday as Representative Byron N. Scott (Democrat), of California, introduced a resolution demanding that Secretary of State Cordell Hull name all nations which have

A Mother-in-Law Rift Reported in Holland Royalty

London, April 18 (AP).—Reports of mother-in-law trouble in the Netherlands royal family were revived tonight as Prince Bernhard headed for home after a holiday in southern Europe without his wife, Crown Princess Juliana. Official sources in the Netherlands declined to comment.

One report said Queen Wilhelmina was distressed because Prince Aschwin, Bernhard's brother, was interested in an Amsterdam widow. Too, the Queen was said to have asked restless Bernhard to cease driving fast after he was injured in an auto accident last November.

1,070,000 Eggs (10 to a Child) Are Trampled Into Five Lawns

By Scott Hart.

They rolled 1,070,000 eggs here yesterday. That was the estimate of impartial observers, but William S. Reeves, head groundkeeper at the White House, will say the number was greater.

And several hundred thousand hens would have cackled triumphantly over the show with their product—the egg. For 107,000 children at five places—the White House lawn, the Zoo, the Capitol Grounds, the Soldiers' Home and at Hyattsville, Md.—flushed the egg market and trampled enough yellow and white on the grass to make the meringue for a pie as big as the Tidal Basin. It was Easter egg-rolling day here, with results like this:

Forty thousand trampled the grass of the White House south lawn; 11 were given first-aid treatment, some for fainting spells, some for bruised knees, some for just crying. Forty-four thousand men, women and children, mostly colored, swarmed the Zoo grounds; 12 lost, were taken to the lion house, where all were later claimed by parents.

Zoo officials, overrun, broke the rule of a lifetime and kept open all attractions excepting the mammal and bird houses on Easter Monday. They managed to keep motor vehicles out by locking the iron gates and hiding the key.

Twenty thousand played on the hills at the Soldiers Home on the finest egg-rolling hills there are. They played on the golf course, rolling eggs in the ninth hole better than golfers do; a 3-year-old made a hole in one, but they gave no prizes for that feat. Some of this crowd drifted in from the Walter Reed Hospital grounds, where egg rolling was forbidden on newly-cropped lawns.

At Hyattsville the crowd reached 5,000, to swarm Magruder Park and leave the grass with a tinge of yellow from the eggs. Out there they

State Control Of U.S. Relief Again Asked

House Minority Report Will Favor Local Administration.

Senate Spending Foes Studying Plans for 'Earmarking.'

The Spending Issue.

Congressional opponents of President Roosevelt's new spending program planned various methods of opposition as House Republicans revived proposals to return Federal relief funds to the States for local administration and Senate opponents studied "earmarking" methods.

The Treasury announced abandonment of its gold sterilization program, initiated December 22, 1936 as an anticredit inflation device.—Page 2.

Testimony of Chairman W. O. Douglas, of Securities and Exchange Commission, failed to break the deadlock of tax bill conferees.—Page 2.

'Earmarking' Studied.

Proposals to return Federal relief funds to the States for local administration were revived yesterday by House Republicans while Senate opponents of the President's new spending program studied "earmarking" methods.

Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican), of New York, promised a minority report will be filed on the $4,512,000,000 program after the House Appropriations Committee completes hearings late next week.

Bacon will propose that the $1,250,000,000 WPA relief fund be turned back to the States for nonpartisan distribution. The New Yorker and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, unsuccessfully attempted a similar amendment of the last relief bill.

Senate coalition opposition meanwhile was fighting shy of the relief issue and concentrating on the $1,450,000,000 PWA pump priming recommendation. It was learned last night that a Senate amendment will be drawn to "earmark" the PWA fund to assure proportionate distribution to States, with population and other factors given weight. Such a plan, if successful, would limit the spending power of the President and place a curb on discretionary allotments by PWA.

Confident the program can be passed through both Houses in rapid time, Congressional leaders returned from a White House con-

Labor Developments.

House Republicans quietly organized support for the Labor Committee's latest wage-hour bill under a new sectional alignment that shattered party lines.

Strikes in the motorcar and transportation industries hampered thousands in various sections of the United States as Canada's first major Great Lakes walkout was ended in agreement between shippers and seamen's union.—Page 2.

Plans of the chemical industry to spend $100,000,000 in expansion of plants, if relieved of uncertainties over taxes and wages, were announced.—Page 26.

Bill Wins Support.

By Robert C. Albright.

Prominent House Republicans yesterday were quietly organizing support for the Labor Committee's latest wage-hour bill under a new House sectional alignment that shattered party lines.

Privately a number of Republicans are seeking a House Republican conference on the issue in an effort to consolidate Republican backing for the measure. The conference proposal has been put up to House Majority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, who last night declined comment.

The sharp change in Republican strategy pivots around the new wage-hour bill drawn by Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, and ordered favorably reported by the House Labor Committee last week.

Only one Republican member of the Labor Committee voted against it—Representative William P. Lambertson, of Kansas.

The bill tosses overboard the sectional differentials sought by the South. It imposes a 25-cent-an-hour statutory floor on wages and a ceiling of 44 hours a week on working time. Wages would gradually be stepped up to 40 cents in three years, and hours cut down to 40 in two years.

"It is the bill which Representative Welch (Richard J. Welch, Republican, California) and myself have fought for from the begin-

The Pope Blesses Gen. Franco After Pledge of Loyalty

Vatican City, April 18 (AP).—A telegram in which Pope Pius sent the apostolic blessing to Spanish insurgent Gen. Franco was published today in L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper.

The holy father's message was a reply to a telegram in which the insurgent leader conveyed "renewed pledges of loyalty" on the occasion of the formal canonization of a new Spanish saint.

The Pope's reply to Franco follows:

"Happy to see vibrating in your excellency's message the hereditary faith of Catholic Spain, whose crown of saints has been enriched for its better fortunes by a new hero of Christian fortitude. We send from our hearts the apostolic blessing propitiator of divine favors."

Hitler Snubs Pope.

Vatican City, April 18 (U.P.).—Vatican prelates tonight said Fuehrer Hitler of Germany, who will come to Rome May 3 on a state visit, appears to have "deliberately snubbed" Pope Pius XI by failing to request a papal audience in conformity with diplomatic custom.

Paris Weighs End of Pact With Russia

Cabinet Will Get Plan for Rome Treaty Tomorrow.

The Situation Abroad.

Abandonment of the pact with Soviet Russia was reported under consideration as France sped plans for an agreement with Italy.

Germany, relieved by Italian assurances the Anglo-Italian pact will not upset the Rome-Berlin axis, hailed the accord as a step toward a general European appeasement.

Twenty thousand loyalist troops were reported trapped as Spanish rebels fought their way into the outskirts of Tortosa.—Page 4.

Pope Pius sent his blessing to Spanish Gen. Franco as Adolf Hitler was reported planning to snub the Vatican on his forthcoming visit to Rome.

Pacts Studied.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 18.—France's "strong man" government worked today toward an agreement with Italy which right-wing leaders thought might lead to a real settlement with Germany and possible abandonment of the Franco-Soviet pact.

The left opposition, whose ardor has been dampened since the collapse of Socialist Leon Blum's cabinet April 8, meanwhile asserted a French-Italian pact would be "useless except to Il Duce."

Talk of a settlement with Germany, it said, was a "surrender."

Draft Tomorrow.

The key to France's diplomacy however was in the hands of Premier Daladier, who joined Blum in 1936 to form the People's Front union of leftist parties and then gained such popularity by his building up of national defense that the present government has left, center and right backing.

The cabinet will meet Wednesday when Daladier and his foreign minister, Georges Bonnet, are expected to present for final approval the plan for a quick French-Italian agreement.

A foreign office spokesman said the French Embassy in Rome had proposed the opening of conversations and it was hoped Premier Mussolini's favorable answer would arrive before the cabinet meeting.

To Discuss 4-Way Pact.

[Premier Mussolini has waived his demands that France restore full diplomatic relations by sending an ambassador to Rome before he enters into negotiations, official Government quarters told the United Press.

[French official quarters said Italy had agreed to begin the talks without waiting for France to appoint a new ambassador bearing letters of credence addressed to King Victor Emmanuel as "Emperor" of Ethiopia.

[France, it was said, will be permitted to withhold de jure recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest until after the League of Nations council, which convenes on May 9.

Stringfellow Barr Assails Modern Emphasis on Success.

The Post Club Editor.

Thousands of women and a sprinkling of men packed Constitution Hall last night for the opening of the Forty-seventh Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The hall, itself a tribute to the achievement of the organization by which it was built, was resplendent with color and pageantry as the national officers, carrying huge bouquets of flowers, marched down aisles to the stage behind white-clad pages—carrying their State flags.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, opened the congress which marks the close of her administration. President Stringfellow Barr, of St. John's College, Annapolis, addressed the Daughters, assailing educational methods of modern liberal arts schools in his talk on "The Ideas Back of the Revolution."

The men who conceived and carried out the Revolution were disciplined by an education which taught them to think, he said, and which was designed to make them "useful" rather than "successful" citizens.

Reminding the women that they were organized to defend the principles of revolutionists, he asserted: "We have converted our education into something too trivial to produce a revolution. Ours might produce violence—a riot inspired by passion, but it would not create Hanchwang Recaptured; Planes Foil Secret Nanking Attack.

Aircraft Carriers Aid Japan's Drive

Fleet Ready to Back Huge Offensive in South Shantung.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), April 19.—Chinese military leaders reported today the recapture of a 20-mile stretch of the Grand Canal in the second setback to the Japanese within 24 hours.

The section of canal extends east and west in southern Shantung Province between Hanchwang and Taierhchwang, where 10 days' fierce fighting was said by the Chinese to have blocked the Japanese offensive southward along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway.

The Chinese advance along the canal was preceded by the capture of Hanchwang, spearhead of the Japanese drive southward toward Suchow.

500 Towns Held Burned.

A new migration of hundreds of refugees into Shanghai brought reports that nearly 500 Chinese villages of the surrounding countryside had been leveled by flames as the Japanese applied their own "scorched earth" version in retaliation against Chinese guerilla attacks.

Hanchwang, at the junction of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the Grand Canal, 27 miles north of Suchow, has been the scene of bitter fighting since the Japanese occupied it a month ago. It is 32 miles northwest of Taierchwang, where the Japanese suffered an overwhelming defeat April 6.

This development came as the Japanese navy was reported preparing to throw its support behind the new Shantung drive which is expected to determine the success or failure of the invasion.

Foreign travelers arriving in Shanghai said they had seen Japanese aircraft carriers stationed at various points along the Shantung coast.

From these carriers, it was presumed, mass warplane attacks will be launched into the interior to cover the advance of the reinforced Japanese army, estimated to have as many as half a million men.

Fierce Fight Continues.

Further evidence that the Japanese are concentrating all efforts to avenge their defeats was seen in the fact that they have withdrawn all troops from large areas in Shansi and North Honan to be used in the new Shantung offensive.

While both sides awaited reinforcements for the big battle, fierce fighting continued over the 60-mile front in southern Shantung.

At Lini, 80 miles northeast of Suchow, the opposing armies were locked in a crucial battle, precipitated when fresh Japanese troops launched an attack on the defense lines built by the thousands of Chinese who have marched into the Lini sector in the past few days.

Foreign observers predicted this battle might develop into the biggest conflict of the nine-month-old war, since Lini is the first major objective in the path of the new Japanese advance down the eastern Shantung coast.

Japanese Cut Off.

Seventy miles to the west, Japanese garrisons at Yihsien and Tsaochwang were encircled and completely cut off from their bases to the north, Chinese advices said. The Japanese, however, still were fighting off the furious counterattacks which the Chinese started three weeks ago.

The Chinese reported a hundred Chinese soldiers had reached the top of the wall at the southwest

McNutt, to Keep Face, Seeks $15,000-a-Year Island Home

People began to wonder yesterday whether the White House will be nice enough for Paul McNutt in 1940.

For it was revealed that the High Commissioner of the Philippines, whose Presidential candidacy started off last February with one of the most glittering revels in Washington history, has elaborate tastes in the matter of housing for himself.

Release of his testimony before a House appropriations sub-committee recently disclosed he had been forced to give up his Philippine residence, which he rented for $6,600 a year, when the owner returned from a world tour.

The only other place "available," said McNutt, is a house whose rent would cost the Government $15,000 a year.

"It must be a splendid house," said a committee member dryly.

"There's no question about that," said McNutt. "But you are providing here for an office which represents sovereignty in an Oriental community. . . . So far as I'm concerned, I would be far more comfortable in a smaller house out on Manila Bay . . . but I must think about the prestige of the office of High Commissioner."

This apparently stunned the committee, for there was no further debate on this point, nor were objections made when he further asked Congress to keep $10,000 handy in order to bring him and his family home if he should resign.

Now $10,000 is a large item, even for a trip from Manila to Indiana. Since McNutt's family consists only of his wife and daughter, there was some muttering yesterday at this item. One sub-committee member said privately yesterday that $10,000 was "large enough to take Joe Kennedy and his family around the world twice." (Kennedy, American Ambassador to Great Britain, has nine children.)

Strike Stops Trolleys, Buses In Columbus

Other Labor Troubles Tie Up Deliveries and Motor Industry.

By the Associated Press.

Strikes forced thousands in Columbus, Ohio, to walk or hitchhike to work yesterday, tied up truck deliveries in Rochester, N. Y., and hampered motorcar production in Michigan and California.

At the same time, Canada's first major Great Lakes walkout was ended by an agreement which became operative between seven big shipping companies and the Canadian Seamen's Union.

An agreement also became effective to end five-week strikes in Harrison, N. J., and Jersey City plants of the Crucible Steel Co.

C. I. O. Seeks Dues.

Labor troubles in the motorcar industry occurred in two far-separated sections—the Detroit area and near Long Beach, Calif.

In Flint, Mich., a C. I. O. auto workers dues-collecting campaign closed the General Motors Corporation Fisher body plant No. 1, the union picketing and turning away nonunion employes and union members who could not show receipts for current dues.

Shortly after the Fisher plant operations were halted, the Buick assembly line was stopped for lack of automobile bodies from the Fisher plant, and some 1,200 men were sent home. Some 3,500 men normally are employed in the body plant.

Near Long Beach, C. I. O. workers threw around the Ford Co. assembly plant a picket line which they said would be manned by 1,000.

An undetermined number of workers disregarded the strike call.

Cononr Sent to Ohio.

In Columbus a streetcar and motorbus operators' walkout reached dead end, and in Washington Secretary of Labor Perkins directed John Connor, a Labor Department conciliator, to go to Ohio and attempt to settle the dispute.

The srikers, dispached in groups of 10 to 25 four major carbarns, demanded the closed shop and wage increases, which Ben W. Marr, president of the Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co., said could not be granted under present business conditions.

Matters were similarly deadlocked in a Rochester truck drivers' strike, which unionists—having already hit hard at Eastern deliveries—considered extending to such essential commodities as coal, milk and ice.

Company representatives said there was no immediate danger of a food shortage in the city, but an operators' spokesman asserted the companies would operate their own trucks to transport perishable foods "if the strike takes too long." The central issues were wages and hours.

Jesse Jones Says Abundance Waits ConfidenceReturn

By the Associated Press.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, declared last night that confident action to solve recession problems would bring better business.

"So much has been said about fear," Jones asserted in a radio address over an N. B. C. network, "that we have all become imbued with the idea that something is wrong with the country, when, as a matter of fact, we have never had a greater abundance of everything needed for a really high standard of living than we have now.

"The basis of prosperity is confidence. We must have confidence in our country and confidence in our Government, and if we demonstrate that confidence by action, better business will follow."

Friend Tells SEC He Held Whitney Honest to the End

By the Associated Press.

Roland Redmond, counsel for the New York Stock Exchange, testified yesterday he had the "utmost confidence" in Richard Whitney until eve of the financial failure of the former exchange president early in March.

Redmond was a witness at the Securities and Exchange Commission's inquiry into failure of the broker, now serving a prison term for misappropriation of customers' securities.

Redmond was one of Whitney's closest advisers at Senate hearings on the Stock Exchange in 1934.

Prohibition Party Urges Babson to Run for President

Chicago, April 18 (AP).—Edward E. Blake, chairman of the Prohibition Party's national committee, asked Roger Babson, the economist, in an open letter today if he would be willing to run for President in 1940.

Commenting on Babson's recent prediction of "coalition or chaos," Blake opined a fusion movement would suffer from the "give and take of politics." He added:

"If no other party arises to espouse principles in which you believe, would you be willing to accept the nomination of the Prohibition Party for President in 1940 and thus offer leadership to the millions of independent voters who are completely dissatisfied with old party corruption and paucity of moral leadership?"

Martha Washington Stamp to Be Brown

The new 1½ cent Martha Washington stamp, which will go into circulation May 5, was described yesterday by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

The stamp, he said, will be similar in size, shape and color to the present brown 1½ cent President Harding stamp. Harding's portriat will be used later on an issue of $2 stamps.

On Capitol Hill

Cummings and Mitchell Oppose Delaying New Federal Court Rules.

A resolution by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, to delay the new rules for Federal court procedure, otherwise effective September 1, was opposed yesterday before a Senate Judiciary sub-committee by Attorney General Homer Cummings, William D. Mitchell, Attorney General under President Hoover, and Arthur T. Vanderbilt, president of the American Bar Association.

SEN. KING.

The new rules were drafted by the Supreme Court under a 1934 Congressional act. Cummings told the committee they represented three and a half years of effort by the Supreme Court and a "distinguished body of lawyers" and were "supported overwhelmingly by the bar and judiciary."

King said the Senators had not had time enough to study the proposals and urged holding them up until after the next session of Congress.

The annual supply bill for civil activities of the War Department, recommending a $113,000,000 appropriation for flood control in the 1938-39 fiscal year, was submitted to the House yesterday by the Appropriations Committee. The amount included the $37,000,000 recommended by President Roosevelt in his message last week.

The committee proposed to divide this increase, $5,000,000 to be added to a proposed $26,000,000 item for Mississippi River valley projects and $32,000,000 to be added to a proposed $50,000,000 appropriation for general flood control in other parts of the country.

Sale of Helium SafeMove, Hull Tells President

Denies Objections; Points Out Germany Built on Our Promise.

By the Associated Press.

The State Department has clearly indicated to President Roosevelt it has no objection to the sale of helium to Germany, persons close to the department said yesterday.

Secretary of Interior Ickes, who has control of helium, has been holding up the sale of the gas to the Reich, on the ground it was difficult to draw an iron-clad contract guaranteeing against military use of the gas. Ickes' attitude led Germany to ask the United States to say exactly whether it would sell the helium for use in a new Transatlantic dirigible built in Germany.

Ickes, it is believed, will now draw up a contract which the State Department hopes will be acceptable to Germany.

War Usefulness Doubted.

The State Department, it was learned, has informed the President that:

It sees no possibility for effective military use of helium. Military experts say dirigibles would not be a sound weapon in a future war.

The State Department already has approved the allocation to Germany of 17,000,000 cubic feet of helium, and has issued a permit for the first export of 2,600,000 feet.

Accumulation Barred.

Adequate precautions already have been taken to prevent the accumulation of helium in Germany in any quantity. The German Zeppelin may pick up on each trip only enough helium to make up for leakage on the way over.

Germany, on receiving assurances that she could buy helium in this country, has made costly changes in the new Zeppelin, LZ-130, which originally was designed to fly with hydrogen.

Further delay in selling the helium would mean that Germany could not start dirigible passenger service early this summer.

Earlier yesterday Representative Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, protested the transfer and said he planned to confer with Secretary Ickes in an effort to revoke the order, issued last November.

'Higher-Ups' Asked to Admit Election Fraud

Judge Denounces Master Plotters in Kansas City Cases.

Kansas City, April 18.—Judge Albert L. Reeves climaxed a record day in the series of Federal vote fraud trials here today with a suggestion "other conspirators" step down "from their high places" and confess "that they conceived, that they planned these atrocious crimes."

Speaking of William J. McMahon, a Democratic precinct captain and city building commissioner, sentenced to three years' imprisonment today, the judge said:

Invites Chiefs to Court.

"He did in his precinct precisely what was done in all the other precincts. . . . In the background are other conspirators who perhaps are men who are in high positions.

"Somehow, it seems to me that if they have never done a noble thing in their rather ignoble lives, it would be fitting if they stepped from their high places, if they stripped themselves of the honors that have been conferred upon them . . . and come into court and contritely confess that they conceived, that they planned these atrocious crimes. . . ."

Almost every case tried, the judge continued, has shown "ruffians and gangsters" at the polls ready, "if necessary, to kill to achieve their ends."

Piling up new records today, the Government brought six defendants of the fourteenth vote fraud case into court, accepted one plea of guilty and five of no defense, and sentenced them, all in one day. Five convicted defendants in the thirteenth case, all from the First Ward stronghold of the incumbent T. J. Pendergast Democratic organization, were sentenced. That made 11—the largest number in one day.

Federal Propaganda Growing, Says Holt

By the Associated Press

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared in a radio address last night that "Government-inspired propaganda is growing at lightning speed."

"Its purpose," he said, "is to lull into acceptance those not interested, stimulate those who follow and smear those who oppose."

Tax Conferees, In 'Stalemate,' Call SEC Chief

Douglas Asked to Clear Up Plan to Help Holding Firms Dissolve.

Congressional conferees paused yesterday in the midst of a tax bill deadlock to seek more light from Chairman W. O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission on tax aids for dissolving utility holding concerns.

Douglas was called back for testimony as conferees recessed immediately after failure of another effort to break the tax stalemate.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he was "optimistic" on prospects of an early agreement. Not so, Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee.

Sees No Progress.

"I'd say that no progress has been made, and present indications look like no progress will be made," said Harrison.

Doughton told reporters: "There must be a way of getting together. Otherwise there will be no tax bill. I'm sure agents of both Houses want the 1936 revenue act revised.

Harrison said the decision to call Douglas did not mean conferees were any nearer agreement on central issues involved. On recommendation of Douglas, the Senate included in its draft of the tax bill an exemption from the capital gains tax for property transactions by holding companies being liquidated under the utility act "death sentence." House conferees wanted the benefit of Douglas' testimony.

Split on Profits Tax.

Key points of disagreement are House provision for continuance of the undivided profits tax principle, and Senate insistence on repeal of the undivided profits tax and imposition of a flat 15 per cent tax on capital gains. The President recently wrote Harrison and Doughton, backing the House bill.

Senate conferees have requested House managers to take Senate provisions to the House floor for a separate vote, but they have refused to do so, Harrison disclosed yesterday. Harrison said Senate conferees are willing to take the bill back to their chamber "at any time." Doughton said he saw "no use" in taking the bill back to the House, which he declared "would confirm the conferees' stand."

Meanwhile, Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, renewed his request for Senate action on a constitutional amendment to remove tax exemptions from Federal, State and local securities issues and official salaries.

Byrd Repeats Stand.

The President last week asked removal of the salary and security tax exemptions by legislation, but Byrd repeated that he thought a constitutional amendment is necessary. He has an amendment pending which would allow reciprocal security taxation on future security issues by Federal, State and local governments, and allow reciprocal taxation of Government pay roll taxes.

Said Byrd:

"I shall urge favorable action vigorously because the results would be: A substantial increase in revenue, a broadened revenue source base, a move in the direction of tax burden equalization, elimination of special privilege and tax evasion by those best able to pay, a greater incentive for investment with greater income for the Government and the individual, and a reduction in the incentive for governmental extravagance."

Byrd said his amendment would remove income tax exemptions from 800,000 Federal workers who receive more than $1,500,000,000 a year and from 4,000,000 State and local workers receiving more than $6,000,000,000 annually. He said it would make taxable $1,114,000,000 in interest now tax exempt, and $804,500,000 in security interest, now partially exempt.

President Roosevelt plans a special message to Congress on tax-exempt securities and interest.

Big WPA Cotton Order Announced by Hopkins

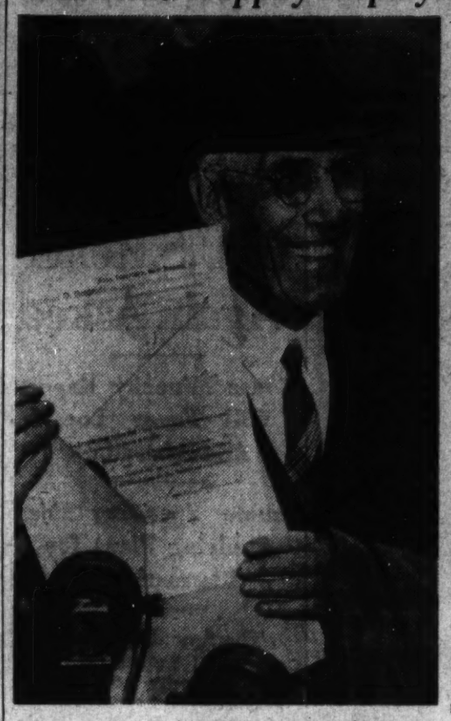
By the Associated Press.

Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced yesterday the WPA would purchase 35,000,000 yards of cotton textiles for sewing room projects.

Orders for the material, Hopkins said, would be placed immediately to aid the industry in maintaining employment and production levels.

Garments and household articles made from cotton in the 9,000 sewing rooms are made by 165,000 women.

Townsend Happily Displays Pardon



Dr. Francis Townsend, old-age pension planner, is shown exhibiting his pardon, granted by President Roosevelt, to reporters and passersby at the courthouse. The pardon came shortly before he was to be transported to the District Jail to serve a 30-day sentence for refusing to testify before a House committee investigating his old-age revolving pension organization.

Townsend, Pardoned, Plans Huge Pension Rally in West

Declares Clemency Is 'Complete Vindication and Act of Contrition on the Part of Congress;' Says 100,000 Backers Will Convene in June.

When President Roosevelt saved Dr. Francis E. Townsend from a 30-day jail sentence yesterday, he virtually opened the door to bigger and better things for the Townsend national recovery plan, said the jovial pension advocate last night.

"I'm going back to the West Coast to make plans for the biggest Townsend Party convention yet," he grinned while opening a batch of congratulatory telegrams in his room at the Lafayette Hotel. "We are going to pack the Olympic Stadium in Los Angeles with 100,000 delegates next June."

A last-minute executive pardon was handed Dr. Townsend as he waited in the office of United States Marshal John Colpoys while commitment papers were being prepared.

Clutching the pardon, which also relieved him of paying a $100 fine, the elderly inventor of old-age revolving pensions declared:

"It is complete vindication and an act of contrition on the part of Congress."

Reminded he had once indicated he would refuse to accept a pardon for his alleged contempt of a House committee, Dr. Townsend said:

"I would be crazy not to accept this pardon. I didn't say I wouldn't accept it—I said I wouldn't seek it."

The White House statement read:

"The nature of the offense is one which concerns primarily the Congress. The authority, the dignity and the rights of the House of Representatives have been fully sustained by the conviction. The Speaker of the House, the majority leader and the chairman of the committee which originally recommended the prosecution have recommended the extension of executive clemency."

Dr. Townsend walked out of a House committee hearing on May 21, 1936, contending the questioning was "unfair." He was convicted in February, 1937, and the conviction was upheld by both the Court of Appeals and United States Supreme Court.

Itemized Panay Bill Is Sent Japan by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The United States has sent Japan a breakdown of the bill for $2,214,007 for sinking of the gunboat Panay and damaging three American oil tankers december 12.

State Department officials disclosed yesterday this action had been taken but did not make public the bill.

An itemization had been asked by Japan.

Treasury Marks End of Policy Of Sterile Gold

New Purchases of Metal Will Be Placed in Working Balance.

By the United Press.

The Treasury last night announced abandonment of its gold sterilization program which was initiated on December 22, 1936, as an anti-credit inflation device.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said following a meeting with Federal Reserve Board officials that the rate at which future acquisitions of gold will be turned into the Nation's credit channels will be determined later.

He pointed out that some time will be required to divert the $1,400,000,000 in gold recently "desterilized" into credit arteries. For the present, he indicated, any new gold purchased by the Treasury will be retained in the working balance until the Treasury is ready to spend it.

Last February, the Treasury undertook a program which involved partial abandonment of sterilization. At that time it was announced that up to $100,000,000 of gold acquired in each quarter of the year would be turned into the credit stream but that all gold in excess of that amount would be sterilized, that is, prevented from going into circulation.

In the first quarter approximately $100,000,000 in gold was purchased and none was sterilized.

Morgenthau said this program no longer exists.

He said he did not know how long future acquisitions of gold will remain in the working balance. This will be discussed at a meeting with Federal Reserve officials tomorrow.

If any foreign government wishes to purchase gold from the United States, Morgenthau said the Treasury could draw on its gold held in three different funds—the working balance, the $200,000,000 active stabilization fund and the $1,800,000,000 portion of the stabilization account which is not now in use.

6 Billions Spent By U.S. This Year

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury, on the threshhold of a new spending program, reported yesterday the Government spent $6,036,446,849 during nine and one-half months of the current fiscal year—$1,087,644,281 more than revenues for the same period.

In a similar period last year, expenditures amounted to $5,891,177,076 and the deficit was $1,951,971,300.

The public debt was $37,563,358,287 on April 15, compared with $34,837,471,252 on the corresponding date last year.

D. A. R. to Plant Oak to Honor Constitution

Maryland Group Sponsors Ceremony at Supreme Court Grounds.

"A Constitution Tree" will be planted by the D. A. R. at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon on the grounds of the U. S. Supreme Court Building. It is a scarlet oak and will be presented by Mrs. Wilbur B. Blakeslee, State regent of Maryland, in behalf of the Maryland Daughters. Mrs. William Chase, chairman of the Maryland State Conservation Committee of the D. A. R., will preside and Senator Millard E. Tydings will deliver an address of acceptance.

The tree planting will be by Mrs. Blakeslee, Mrs. Avery Turner, Mrs. Harry K. Niel and Mrs. Chase. The dedication will be by Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Virginia, and the Hon. William Tyler Page, author, will recite the American Creed.

Music will be by the U. S. Marine Band which will play "Trees" and the National Anthem. Riverdale and Hyattsville Boy Scouts will take part in the program.

The National committee on conservation of which Mrs. Avery Turner, of Amarillo, Tex., is chairman, is actively campaigning to save the last great stands of Virgin timber in the State of Washington from commercialism.

The committee sponsored the movement to have the Government create a national park of the Olympic forests in Washington.

The conservation committee also has been urging larger appropriations in the fight to eradicate the "Dutch Elm" disease and to combat the "Tent Caterpillar" pest in New Mexico.

Great progress has been made in fighting the elm disease in New York, New Jersey and other States by use of autogiros to spotting the elm trees blighted by the plant disease. The committee believes appropriations should be made available until this pest can be gotten under control. It already has destroyed many of the finest elm trees in Eastern States.

Youth-Program Of D. A. R. Pays Dividends Here

The emphasis on youth which is being given throughout the program of the D. A. R. is showing results in the interest of young people in attending the congress. Not only are there the pages, good citizenship pilgrims and approved school students brought here by the organization, but also many young people who have been reached in one way or another by the work of the D. A. R. and who have come "on their own."

One of these is Leah Hicks, of Keuka College, Keuka Park, N. Y., an Indian girl who formerly attended Bacone College, in Oklahoma. Miss Hicks, as a student at Bacone, won the prize offered by the D. A. R. for the student outstanding in history. This aroused her interest in the organization and, combined with her desire to hear the Bacone Glee Club, which is to appear on Friday's program, brought her to Washington.

Miss Hicks was formerly a member of the glee club and of the college choir and was president of the girls' dormitory during her senior year. She was also secretary-treasurer of the student government association, was chosen football queen and had many other distinctions. She is at present news editor of her college paper.

Miss Margaret Carl, Filipino, is another attending the Continental Congress. She has come from New York, where she is doing post-graduate work in nursing at Columbia University.

Miss Carl was graduated last January with a degree of bachelor of science. During her last semester, the university sent her to Westchester County department of health headquarters at White Plains, N. Y., where she did the required field work in connection with her social service course. The Westchester Health Department, invited her to join its regular staff, and she will be there until June, when she sails for the Philippines to serve among her people.

D. C. Woman Gets Treasure Found in Hagerstown Home

The treasure cache found Friday behind a secret panel in an old Hagerstown home was awarded yesterday to Mrs. Inez Van Valkenburg Gerling, 2424 Nineteenth street northwest.

The cache, consisting of numerous old gold coins and valuable pieces of antique jewelry, was discovered by a maid, Virginia Heard, while cleaning the house. The mansion, built by Mrs. Gerling's grandfather, later occupied by her parents, was recently claimed by a Hagerstown bank.

Neither Mrs. Gerling nor detectives to whom the maid gave the treasure, were able to estimate value of the find. The cache was placed in the hiding place nearly 20 years ago following the death of her mother, Mrs. Gerling said, and had been forgotten until it was discovered Friday.

Japanese to Farm Lands at Shanghai

Shanghai, April 18 (AP).—Japanese authorities said today that 1,000 Formosan farmers were en route here as immigrants to engage in farming in the outskirts of Shanghai, which already is one of the most thickly populated areas in the world.

The Chinese press pointed out that the Formosans planned to occupy Chinese-owned lands and predicted racial clashes similar to those which occurred in North China and Manchuria when Japanese colonials took over Chinese lands.

Mrs. Roosevelt Joins Gay Throng at White House Egg Rolling

Associated Press Photos.

As happy as any of the 42,000 children and adults who assembled on the White House lawn for the annual egg-rolling festivities was Mrs. Roosevelt. She is shown above in the midst of a small portion of the throng and (above, right) with Shirley Harr, who presented her hostess with a bouquet.

held a kid calling contest for mothers (won by Mrs. Ruth Taliaferro, of Cottage City, with Mrs. Joseph R. Bardas, of Berwyn, second, and Mrs. Jerry Flannagan, of Arlington, third.)

In an interlude of yelling and egg throwing, Charles Shyrock, of Hyattsville, won a pie-eating contest, downing a chocolate meringue pie in a minute and a half flat. Too full of pie, he was listless for the remainder of the afternoon.

On Capitol Hill 2,000 children overran the west front in one of the largest crowds seen there since Coxey's Army. Like those at the White House, the Zoo and Hyattsville, they didn't do much rolling. Favoring baseball as the American sport, most of them pitched eggs, throwing outcurves and fast balls promisingly.

None of them cared about the rain. The chief carers about anything were the White House grounds keepers. The statement by Reeves, an annual custom, was issued around 1 p. m., when some 38,000 children and adults were on the grounds:

"The youngsters make an awful mess. But they have a fine time," he said.

30 Men, All Night.

"I don t believe the crowd is as big as last year; anyhow, 30 men, working all night, ought to have it cleaned out by morning."

His guess, at the start, was right. The figure last year was 53,180. The rain must have held them back this time. It rained intermittently, spitefully, but heaviest when the President appeared on the south portico to say a fleeting word, which, in the absence of amplifiers, was inaudible to the crowd.

But they reacted to his Roosevelt salute, the waving hand. They waved back, and yelled. And when the President returned indoors, they started pitching eggs again. They started walking on eggs that had been pitched and left on the grass; they started posing for photographers and listening to the band concerts from the Marine Band, the National Training School Band, and the youngsters from the Good Samaritan Home with drums and bugles. They saw the clown, in red wig and whiskers, big shoes and flopping ears, come down the south steps, waving his hands.

Mrs. Roosevelt Appears.

Mrs. Roosevelt appeared twice in the crowd in the forenoon, attired in a riding habit. But mostly there was no official appearance; the children were left to their own devices.

Sergt. Ralph Brown, of the Prince Georges force, fired one serious pistol shot at 9 a. m. to open the hunt at Hyattsville. A long line of children swept forward, like an elastic band, stretching. They got on their hands and knees, a moment later, detectives in search of 1,000 eggs hidden in the long grass, under stumps, roots, behind hedges, everywhere.

Of the hidden eggs, 250 were prize ones. The gold goose eggs, bringing finders $1 each, were found by Anthony Constine, Hyattsville; Richard Redmon, Hyattsville; Bunky Lohman, Bladensburg, and William Underwood and Buddy Pullman, of Brentwood. All the others had a good time, too.

Of significance was the trend away from gate crashing at the White House. It is a custom, in the earlier part of the day, to admit adults only when accompanied by children. Children, in the past, had been renting themselves out to adults anyhow, which may have been a New Deal order, or at least innovation.

Many Functions Give Police in D.C. Their Busiest Day

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, sank into his bed near midnight and sighed, thankful that the busiest day in the annals of District police had closed successfully.

Police headquarters was practically vacated yesterday while every available detective and uniformed man attended the White House egg rolling, the Daughters of the American Revolution convention, the opening ball game or the boxing show at Turner's Arena.

Maj. Brown attended each of the day's many functions seeing that his men carried through their orders. All policemen who had planned fishing trips or the like were on hand too because all leave was canceled.

Twenty-two rookies from the police school were called on to handle the crowd at Griffith Stadium.

Black Face, Red Hair Land Chain Fugitive in Jail

A fugitive from a Florida chain gang, Jesse Jacob Castor, 26, was captured yesterday by a Montgomery County policeman. Informed of plans to return him to Florida, he said, "I guess it's the box for me."

Prisoners who attempt escape are confined for long stretches of time in a box too small to stand in, Castor claimed.

He was picked up by Officer Joseph W. Ward, of the Bethesda sub-station, whose curiosity was aroused by a combination of black face and red hair. The ebony complexion proved to be the result of burnt cork applications. Castor admitted he had fled from a chain gang in Jacksonville.

2 Va. Policemen Who Slew D. C. Man Indicted

Arlington Grand Jury Returns Murder Bill at First Session.

Edwin Schein, 23, and Herbert C. Knox, 24, Falls Church policemen, were indicted yesterday for the murder of Theodore B. Daugherty, Washington musician whom they shot to death after they halted his car on the Lee highway March 20.

The Arlington grand jury, sitting for the first time in the April term, accused both men in an indictment which charged that "Scheib did feloniously, willfully and maliciously assault Daugherty with a pistol." Knox was accused of "feloniously, willfully and with malicious forethought aiding, abetting and assisting Scheib to commit murder."

Frank L. Ball, counsel for the defendants and former State Senator, requested time to study the indictment, but it was expected the men would be arraigned Friday, at which time the trial date will be set.

With heads lowered, Scheib and Knox entered the crowded Arlington courthouse shortly after disposition of their case. Bail was continued for both men at $2,500 each.

Parking Group To Use National Survey as Model

Special Body Here to Make Public Study of 200 City-Owned Units.

A nation-wide survey of municipally-owned parking lots was completed yesterday in Chicago and will be forwarded to the special committee here to serve as a basis for a District parking project, it was announced.

The survey, in more than 200 cities, was made under auspices of the American Society of Planning Officials and the International City Managers' Association.

Under the plan as introduced in Congress by Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, 12 lots would be established in the downtown area, available for parking at 10 cents per day.

The survey will be made public by a special committee appointed recently by Commissioner George E. Allen to study the project. John Nolan, jr., of the Park and Planning Commission, member of the special committee, stated yesterday the full report would be made next week.

In the meantime, the public will have an opportunity to be heard at a meeting this week, a date for which has not been announced. Director of highways, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, is chairman of the special committee.

Italians Trap 20,000 in Hills Around Tortosa

Insurgents Close Mouth of Ebro, Hammer Way Into Suburbs.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, April 18.—Insurgent armies tonight hammered their way into the suburbs of Tortosa along the Rio Ebro Delta and drove 20,000 loyalists, including American volunteers of the international brigades, into a trap.

Insurgent headquarters at Salamanca announced at 11 p. m. that its troops were fighting their way through the outer streets of Tortosa, while other advices added that the town of Cherta to the north of Tortosa had been seized in a rapid encirclement.

A Salamanca communique reported that a loyalist warship was sunk and four others were badly damaged when a fleet of insurgent planes dropped 80 tons of bombs on Cartagena, loyalist naval base, north of Valencia.

The fall of Tortosa appeared imminent as Gen. Franco's brigades surged on from north and south to wipe out a major stumbling block in the way of Franco's conquest along the Mediterranean coast.

Italians Avenge Defeat.

The trap was closed at the mouth of the Ebro, 7 miles below Tortosa, when insurgents under Gen. Garcia Valino seized the key town of Amposta and drove on along both sides of the river to within a half mile of the loyalist city's walls.

Before occupying Amposta, Valino's Galician troops closed a large pocket formed by the towns of Valderrobres, Morella and Ulldecona—an area of more than 420 square miles—and stretched out Franco's hold on the coast to a strip of 43½ miles.

Loyalist defenders were marooned south and southwest of Tortosa in the mountain ranges.

Insurgents said the loyalists faced the choice of surrender, continuing a suicidal defense or attempting to swim the Ebro River outside Tortosa at a point where it is three-quarters of a mile wide.

Valino's swift drive upon Tortosa from the south and southeast was intended to wipe out the stigma of two weeks of vain effort on the part of his Italian "Black Arrow" Legionnaires to take the town from the north.

The loyalist international brigades, including many poles, Czechs and anti-Fascist Germans, had repulsed every effort of the Italians to extend their lines down the Ebro from Cherta, 6 miles above Tortosa.

The inability of the Italians forced Franco to shift the spearhead of his drive to the sea and reach the coast at Vinaroz to the south.

Loyalists Admit Plight.

Loyalist dispatches from Barcelona frankly admitted the plight of the defenders of Tortosa and reported that the rebel pincers were closing in on 3,000 loyalists in the Ulldecona-San Carlos De La Rapita pocket along the coast. San Carlos is just south of the great marshlands of the Ebro Delta.

At San Carlos more than 1,000 loyalists, including some units of the British and American international brigades, were making a valiant, last stand defense.

The insurgents also threatened to seize 10,000 tons of rice in the marshlands and the Barcelona government, sorely in need of foodstuffs, rushed trucks to the area through heavy shell fire in an effort to move the supply.

Tortosa was said to have been virtually destroyed by insurgent bombardments. Only a few civilians remained.

Early today, in preparation for the assault on Tortosa, Franco landed a large force of troops at Vinaroz from the Balearic Islands under protection of warship convoys.

Loyalists sent out fleets of fighting planes in an effort to prevent the movement of troops by sea, but without results.

D. C. Business Tax Penalty Drafted

District

$2,000,000 and $2,300,000 since the Senate approved the tax.

The remainder of the revenue will come from the House provisions; i. e., a 25-cent increase in the realty rate above the normal $1.50 and a 50-cent-a-barrel beer levy. The former will produce $3,000,000 and the latter $200,000, the report stated.

The report also carries a new estimate of the deficit for the next fiscal year of $431,083, although District officials have suggested $4,400,000 and $4,500,000.

An estimate that the reduction in the primary exemption from $2,000 to $1,000 will produce $100,000 in license fees alone is in the report. During the current year, it states, 10,000 free licenses were issued because the licensees qualified as having done less than $2,000 worth of business in 1936.

Hundreds of taxi drivers qualified under this exemption. The new bill, it is believed, will reach almost every type of business except perhaps newspaper boys and street venders.

The proviso which prohibits the issuance of a license to any business or professional man who failed or refused to pay his tax this year will serve as a method of collecting delinquent taxes. So long as District officials hold up a new license, the business or professional man cannot practice.

The revised business privilege tax carries a provision specifically applying the tax to interstate commerce so as to prevent any confusion or doubt as to the right of the District to impose the levy on goods brought into the Capital from the States.

ideas which would justify a revolution—in the end constructive."

The greatest failing of the American race, he asserted is its indifference to the significance of history. "None can protect American tradition without understanding it at a much deeper level than we now do. The men who built this Nation and wrote its Constitution, showed no sign that they could do without the heritage of wisdom and past cultures. They were men whose minds were disciplined and therefore were free. They had learned to apply them to reasonable and logical conclusions. The schools in which our forefathers were educated," said Mr. Barr, "still disciplined and informed the mind instead of cluttering it."

The speaker was introduced at the end of a long program including patriotic ceremonies, the introduction of the Good Citizenship Pilgrims . . . senior high school girls from every State in the Union who had won the D. A. R. award . . . greetings by the Secretary of Commerce, Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Messmore Kendall, president of the Sons of the American Revolution.

French Envoy Speaks.

The Ambassador of France, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, who headed the list of honor guests from the Diplomatic Corps, was presented in the early part of the evening and spoke briefly. He commended the society on its work in promoting education designed to preserve the principles on which the country was founded, on its work among newcomers to our shores, its insistence on the correct use of the flag and its interest in the guidance of youth.

He closed with allusion to the close bond between this country and France. At the end of his address the Marine Band Orchestra, which was in the orchestra pit, struck up the "Marseillaise" and the great audience stood while it was played.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, who was also to have been a guest of honor, as he was last year, sent a note yesterday afternoon explaining that official duties which had arisen made it impossible for him to be present. Mrs. Becker read his note of regret, adding that he had fully intended to be there and had promised her last fall at a reception that he would appear, "honest injun."

Youth Is Accented.

Invocation at opening of the program was offered by Bishop James E. Freeman, who included the Supreme Court in the departments of Government on which he asked blessing.

Mrs. Martin L. Sigmon led the pledge to the flag and William Tyler Page, author of The American Creed, led the recitation of that as he has for the past 18 years. A huge American flag, unfurled above the heads of the audience from the center of the auditorium as the opening procession took place, made an impressive point of direction for thousands of hands which were raised as the women repeated "I pledge allegiance to the flag——"

The accent on youth which is to mark the Congress this year was present at the opening last night, Mrs. Becker introduced Mrs. William H. Pouch, organizing secretary general of the D. A. R. and president of the National Society of the American Revolution, who told of the growth and aims of that organization.

Blocs Splitting In House Over Wage-Hour Bill

ning," said Representative Clyde H. Smith (Republican), of Maine.

Smith stated frankly that he favored the bill "because it leaves out the differentials favorable to the South." He said he believes the fixed wage-hour provisions of the Norton bill would "stop this migration of Northern industries to the South to take advantage of low wages."

Crucial test of the new strategy will come in the House Rules Committee. That group divided 10 to 4 against the wage-hour bill (carrying differentials) after it was reported last session by the Labor Committee. At that time, all four Republican members opposed the bill.

Mrs. Norton is now counting on a switch of enough Republican and Democratic Rules Committee votes to get her new bill to the floor. Chief among these doubtful members is Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Republican), of Massachusetts, assistant minority leader and ranking Republican member of the committee. Other Republican switches on the committee were less certain, as were the hopes held out that one or two Democratic votes will change.

May "Carry the Ball."

If the Republican leadership decides to "carry the ball" on the Administration's own wage-hour bill it will not only take the lid off a bill Democratic leaders have been unable to move but will start political repercussions that may echo into 1940.

Democratic leaders recognize that there is so much sectional dynamite in the bill that if it ever gets to the floor, Northern members will be arrayed against Southern in a miniature legislative reproduction of the War Between the States. And such a battle on the floor, with Republicans in part or en bloc supporting the bill, could only end in defeat for the outnumbered South, observers believed.

The Rules Committee is still the unknown quantity in the fight, and if it again refuses to approve a rule on the bill, there will be no wages and hours legislation this session. But if the bill goes to the floor, with Republican support, leading opponents conceded it would be almost impossible to stop it in the House. The last stand in that case, they said, would come in the Senate, where Southern members could be counted on to filibuster against adoption of a wage-hour conference report.

Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, today will file a minority report opposing the new Norton draft of the wage-hour measure. His report will advocate the flexible compromise his subcommittee recently recommended, which was voted down, 10 to 8, by the Labor Committee.

G.O.P. in House Seeks to Return Relief to States

ference yesterday to map plans for House floor consideration of the measure by May 2.

Closed hearings will open before the House Appropriations Committee tomorrow, with Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins on the stand. Farm Security Administration officials will testify Thursday and the following day Secretary Ickes may explain detailed plans for the PWA spending-lending program.

Chief concern of the House leadership is how to move the entire program through the House in one bill, without risk of the measure being riddled by points of order against legislative features not ordinarily permitted in an appropriation bill.

Three courses of procedure were under study. The first move would be to seek unanimous consent of the House to consider the bill in order. If that fails (and it probably will), these courses would be left:

Leaders could seek a special rule from the normally conservative House Rules Committee, making the legislation in order. As a last resort, the bill could be considered under a suspension of the rules. This last course would require a two-thirds vote of the House, but leaders believe they can get it. Under rules suspension procedure, only 20 minutes debate is allowed on each side.

Telegrams Flow In.

The first flow of letters and telegrams on the spending issue began reaching members of both houses yesterday, but except in one or two instances, it was far below recent reorganization bill reaction.

House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell exhibited a stack of letters, all hostile, which he said was larger than he received in any one day on the reorganization bill. Both Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Warren R. Austin (Republican), of Vermont, said their letters were running strongly against the program. But Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, and Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said their letters predominantly favored the program.

The regular Monday White House legislative conference was held earlier yesterday, with Vice President Garner, Speaker William B. Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn all attending.

Intercepted by reporters on his way from the conference, Garner was asked about his reported opposition to the spending program.

"I'm going to get in my automobile," said the Vice President as he hastened to his car.

Bankhead told reporters there was no discussion of proposed monopoly legislation and reciprocal taxation of Federal and State securities and salaries. The President recently told newsmen he would send messages to Congress on both subjects.

Leaders are proceeding under the belief that both subjects will go over for action next session, and the present program calls for a clean-up of as much of the pending program as possible by late May. Besides the key spending program, the deadlock on the tax bill must be broken before adjournment, and the new wage-hour bill may yet be forced to the floor.

Although the bulk of the President's new program will be included in one omnibus bill, several separate items have been deleted for purposes of expedition. The reported bill carrying nonmilitary appropriations for the War Department, for example, yesterday carried the $37,000,000 recommended last week by the President for flood control. It was included in a $113,000,000 flood control appropriation for the 1938-39 fiscal year. Other spending items to be segregated included $101,500,000 for highways to be added to the Agriculture Department bill and $50,000,000 for CCC camps which already has passed the House in a separate measure.

Any effort to "earmark" funds for special activities was apparently forestalled by the President's submission of his own earmarkings. But Senate Democratic opponents will attempt earmarking of a different sort—a statutory division of the PWA funds by States, depriving the executive department of power to make its own division.

Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who has battled on every preceding relief bill to increase WPA outlays, said last night he will not attempt to raise the new $1,250,000,000 relief appropriation if adequate assurance is given that the $1,450,000,000 PWA spending allotment will be quickly spent. "If these are to be slow-moving PWA projects, I will ask an increase in the relief item," said Boileau.

Senate Gets Big Navy Bill; Hull Asked to Name Pact Breakers

violated treaties with the United States.

Scott's measure, pointed directly at revision of the neutrality act to make it apply only to aggressor countries, asks the naming of nations that have violated any of these treaties: The Kellogg-Briand Pact, outlawing warfare of aggression; the Nine-Power Treaty guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China; the Buenos Aires peace treaties of 1936, and the British-French-American-Japanese agreement concerning Pacific Ocean island possessions.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committe, said last night he will submit the Scott resolution to the State Department for a recommendation. McReynolds said he had no information on a "downtown rumor" that President Roosevelt may tell Secretary Hull to name Germany, Japan and Italy as "treaty violators."

Neutrality Act Foe.

Scott has repeatedly endeavored to obtain revision of the neutrality act, at least to the extent in which it has been used to maintain an arms embargo on both factions in the Spanish civil war. Scott's view is that this embargo has operated to the advantage of the insurgents under Gen. Franco, reportedly aided aided heavily by Germany and Italy, while the loyalists have been unable to buy arms and munitions.

Senate opponents of the naval expansion bill stressed yesterday their fight would be directed toward forcing the Administration to "clarify its foreign policy."

In a draft of a proposed minority report, made public last night, and which Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he would sign, a legislative investigation of national defense needs and of naval building costs was proposed.

Bill Up Today.

But Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), of Washington, an opponent of the bill, said he thought no formal minority report would be offered, except as informal "observations."

Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Affairs Committee, prepared to call the bill up for Senate action today.

The measure's chief change over the bill passed by the House on March 21 is in the authorization of a 30,000-ton addition to the total battleship tonnage. The House proposed three battleships at 35,000 tons each: the Senate three at 45,000 tons each. The House authorized two 15,000-ton aircraft carriers; the Senate two 20,000-ton carriers.

The report of the majority emphasized the basic assumption that since "the United States is not self-contained and our industries and high standards of living depend upon the importation of essential raw materials" therefore the United States Navy must be sufficient in size "adequately to protect our trade routes in time of war."

Materials Needed.

It stated: "At the present time we are wholly dependent on sources outside this hemisphere for tin, rubber, manila fiber, quinine and silk. Other items are produced in insufficient quantities in this hemisphere, and of inferior quality, to maintain our existing industries. Among these other items are manganese, chromium, tungsten and quicksilver. All of these materials are necessary to the continuance of existing industries in this country."

In analyzing the war problem of the United States, the report stated: "The United States can be conquered and defeated without military conquest of the continental United States. Without a navy capable of controling the sea areas against an enemy, an effective blockade against our foreign commerce can be established and maintained at points thousands of miles from our coasts and well beyond aircraft range. Our outlying possessions will be captured and used against us as advance bases. There will be nothing to prevent the establishment of bases, by force if necessary, in this hemisphere, from which as well as from aircraft carriers, repeated bombing raids can be dispatched against our highly industrialized areas."

U. S. Defeat Pictured.

In event of American capitulation through blockades, the committee pictured as one possible peace condition—"repeal of our immigration restrictions," adding:

"Should this bar to Orientals be removed the pressure of migration from heavily overpopulated Oriental countries might easily in a generation effectively conquer our country, as American labor could not survive in competition with low-standard Oriental labor."

The tentative minority report, which Senator Guy Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, said he would not sign although he opposes the bill, contended that the 45,000-ton battleships were not required for national defense; that existing naval construction under the Vinson-Trammell act is sufficient to build up the Navy, and that construction of more ships now would lead to "extravagant profiteering."

The National Council for Prevention of War, in a statement opposing the big Navy bill, declared that an "increase in the United States Navy and in the size of battleships at this time will inevitably increase world tensions and thereby the danger of war."

The House passed and sent to the White House yesterday a bill reestablishing the regular Army reserve at 75,000 men, thus permitting enlistment in the reserves of men who have served in the Army but have since retired. This would allow rapid expansion of the Army in event of war.

Libyan Air Crash Kills 3, Injures 4

Tripoli, Libya, April 18 (AP).—Two Libyan women and a child were killed last night when a plane in which four Italians were trying for a new London-Capetown record crashed at Zuara on the coast west of Tripoli.

Gianni Albertini, leader of the flight, was gravely injured. His three companions were less seriously hurt.

The plane had reached the North African coast with its gasoline nearly exhausted and plunged into two native tents. Those killed were in one of the tents.

Daladier Works On Rome Pact, May Quit Allies

Paris

releases France and other powers from anti-recognition pledges.—Editor's Note.]

The projected pact would follow the lines of the agreement signed Saturday in Rome for settlement of Mediterranean, Ethiopian and Spanish issues between Great Britain and Italy.

There was a hope a French-Italian accord could be signed before Reichsfuehrer Hitler arrives May 3 in Italy for his visit with Mussolini.

Beyond negotiations with Italy, the main question before France was whether Daladier and Bonnet, when they visit London April 28, would be receptive to efforts to forge a four-power pact among Britain, France, Italy and Germany.

The premier and his foreign minister will confer in the British capital with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

Two main paths lie open to the premier:

A four-power pact including Germany and French abandonment of Soviet Russia and Czechoslovakia. This is the way advocated by the Pierre Flandin group of Rightists.

France can follow Britain no further than an agreement with Italy. This is the Leftist way.

Formar Premier Flandin's group argues that once the question of the German minority in Czechoslovakia is settled, Hitler might be willing to guarantee the integrity of that war-created republic.

Berlin, April 18 (AP).—Whatever misgivings may have existed in Germany that an Anglo-Italian accord might weaken the Rome-Berlin axis have vanished, at least outwardly, in view of Italy's solemn assurances that the axis would continue to function with undiminished strength.

German officials after watching the Rome negotiations with great anxiety, now see reasons for rejoicing.

They feel that Prime Minister Chamberlin, encouraged by his Itilian success, now is likely to press for an Anglo-German arrangement. Hitler has never made any secret of the fact that he regards friendship with Great Britain the most important of his foreign political objectives.

Another reason for their satisfaction is that they feel the importance of Soviet Russia as a European factor will diminish as the non-Communist powers clear up misunderstandings between themselves.

The newspaper Frankfurter Jeitung expressed the opinion that if the London-Paris axis could be joined to the Rome-Berlin axis European peace would be assured.

The paper said one link like the Anglo-Italian agreement was not enough and that two more or three, should be devised: An Anglo-German accord, an Italian-French accord and, as a crowning glory, a French-German accord.

Members of the petroleum council said they were extremely satisfied with their first sale, which was said to have been arranged at a "price favorable to Mexico."

Erskine Caldwell Divorced by Wife

Augusta, Me., April 18 (AP).—Superior Court Justice Albert Believeau today granted Helen Caldwell, of Mount Vernon, Me., a divorce from her author-husband, Erskine Caldwell.

The decree ordered the author of "Tobacco Road" to pay Mrs. Caldwell $2,600 yearly for the support of their three children, plus an additional $12,000. Caldwell did not contest the divorce which was granted on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

The Caldwells were married in 1923 in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Caldwell was formerly Helen Lannagan, of Charlottesville, Va., and both attended the University of Virginia.

Andrew Carnegie Nephew Vanishes

Carnegie Nephew Missing Still After Vanishing on Plane Hop

Mystery Cloaks Disappearance of Broker Who Started Out to Fly 40 Miles on Friday and Left No Clew to His Fate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—Mystery cloaking the disappearance of Andrew Carnegie Whitfield, aviator nephew of the late multi-millionaire steelmaster, deepened tonight as the most hopeful clew yet turned up proved apparently fruitless.

Information had pointed strongly to the possibility that Whitfield might have sailed with Frank Steinman, another aviator, for Europe aboard the Red Star Liner Westernland last Saturday as an unlisted passenger.

But today Capt. Henry Claussen wirelessed from the Westernland: "Steinman last saw Whitfield three weeks ago. No knowledge aboard."

Married less than a year to the former Elizabeth Halsey, socially prominent daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hunt Halsey, of New York, the 28-year-old Whitfield had only recently been transferred to the Bethlehem, Pa., office of the International Business Machine Co.

He was to have left Friday night for Pennsylvania, said his distraught wife.

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, searched widely off Long Island; an eight-State police alarm went out; an appeal was made to all private pilots in the East to keep watch for Whitfield's plane; a similar appeal was dispatched by the brother, John Whitfield, to four ships which were at sea within a radius of 400 miles from New York at the time Whitfield vanished.

'Mystery Fleet' Not American, Leahy Reveals

Reports From Philippines of Strange Visit Present 'Serious Implications.'

By the United Press.

The "mystery fleet" which reportedly steamed into Philippine harbor last week was not American, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, said last night.

Another high Navy official said an intelligence report from Manila proved there had been war vessels, numbering "12 or 13," in Davao Gulf off the Island of Mindanao, last week.

The intelligence report added that Japanese warships were "in the general neighborhood" on that date.

War Department officials have received a report from Gen. Paulino Santos, chief military officer of the Philippine Commonwealth, who also conducted an investigation. The report had "serious implications," one official said.

The fact that intensive study is being given to the general Pacific situation, from both the military and commercial viewpoints, was heavily underscored by a conference yesterday between President Roosevelt and high Navy, Interior and State Department officials.

corner of Yihsien with scaling ladders, but had been forced to withdraw under heavy machine-gun fire.

In southwestern Kiangsu, the Chinese asserted they had recaptured Changchuchen and were attacking Liyang in an effort to sever Japanese communications between Nanking and Hangchow.

(A Hongkong dispatch said 250 civilians were killed and more than 300 injured Sunday in a Japanese air raid on Canton and railways near the South China metropolis. Railway service between Canton and Hongkong was interrupted.)

Premier Apologizes.

Tokyo (Tuesday), April 19 (AP).—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye broke a three-week silence today and issued a statement designed to allay public anxiety over a growing cabinet crisis resulting from military reverses in China.

Speaking through Akira Kazami, chief secretary of his cabinet, the premier "apologized" for an illness that has confined him to his home while he struggled against militarists' demands for invocation of the drastic mobilization law.

"I apologize to the Emperor, the soldiers in the field and the people generally that I have been confined to my bed so long," the secretary quoted Konoye as saying.

"However, I hope when my health is restored again to attend to my duties."

Political circles said the "apology" was a "strategic politeness" in the behind-the-scenes struggle.

It was said Konoye wished to dispel the public belief that Prince Kimmochi Saionji, 88-year-old elder statesman, was contemplating a decision in the cabinet conflict next Thursday after he confers with the minister of education, Marquis Koichi Kido.

Kido had been one of the premier's principal supporters in opposing demands of army and navy leaders for invocation of the total mobilization law because of the stalemate reached in Japan's Chinese campaign.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi sharply criticized both the premier and Kido concerning the cabinet crisis reports.

"There is only one source of the rumors being circulated and that is the premier himself," the paper said.

Referring to a statement Kido made after a talk with the premier, Nichi Nichi declared "it is unbelievable for a cabinet minister publicly to admit a political crisis exists."

Kido had said that he believed Konoye would not resign, but that "it is reasonable for such anxiety to be present."

The minister of education is one of Konoye's closest friends and political circles said he strengthened the premier's hand by admitting publicly there was a possibility the militarists' demands might force him out of office.

Chinese Raid Nanking.

Shanghai (Tuesday), April 19 (U.P.). A Japanese army spokesman revealed today that three Chinese armies had been repulsed in a series of daring raids on Nanking designed to relieve Japanese pressure on the Chinese in south Shantung Province, northeast of Suchow.

The Chinese attempted a triple drive on Nanking, the spokesman said, admitting that the attacks might have met a measure of success had it not been for the effectiveness of the Japanese aerial scouting force.

The spokesman said the first Chinese column advanced during darkness toward Nanking from Chinese positions southwest of Hangchow but was crushed by Japanese mobile units after it had been spotted by Japanese naval planes.

The second column succeeded in filtering through the thin Japanese lines in the Wuhu area, on the south bank of the Yangtse above Nanking, but also was spotted and dispersed at a point 40 miles northwest of Nanking.

The third column, estimated at 1,700 men, attempted a landing 12 miles upstream from Nanking after floating down the Yangtse in junks which appeared to be innocent merchant vessels.

A Proper Pardon.

It was entirely fitting for leaders of the House to request and the President to grant a pardon to Dr. Francis E. Townsend. Nothing would have been accomplished by incarcerating the promoter of the fantastic old-age pension plan which engaged the attention of the country a few years ago. Indeed, that outcome would have closed an amazing subchapter in American history with a sour note.

When Dr. Townsend walked out of a House committee room and refused to testify further he was the leader of what many Congressmen feared might become a formidable movement. But the Townsend plan for making everybody prosperous by furnishing old folks with plenty of cash to squander has long since been in the scrap heap of discarded ideas. And since his scheme is no longer considered politically dangerous, the House has no desire to see the pensions promoter punished for contempt.

If the aged California doctor had been treated with ordinary courtesy he probably would not have walked out of the committee room and no charges would have been brought against him. As matters stand, the outcome has probably been more of a lesson to the House than Dr. Townsend.

The ironic aspect of the case is that the House, which bore down so heavily upon the author of the Townsend plan, is now about to consider a milder form of the reckless spending policy on which his pensions scheme was based. And the present efforts to bring about prosperity by an outpouring of money from the Federal Treasury are sponsored by the Administration. That seems to make the pardon doubly fitting.

The Same Old Game.

A patent was granted here in Washington only a few days ago which, if put to general use, might well make this the last year that a man in a blue suit and an English school boy's cap will call "Batter-r-r-up!" in Griffith Stadium. The invention is a robot baseball umpire. Electrically operated, it has mechanical "eyes" which can detect beyond all disputing which pitches are strikes and which balls. Adjustments can be made to fit the varying heights of batters.

But unless we misjudge badly the temper of the 30,000 who yesterday attended the opening game, the robot will never replace George Moriarty and his stentorian colleagues. It wouldn't be baseball without them. As soon roll indestructible eggs on the White House lawn as have a photoelectric cell behind the catcher. The game is nothing without its human element. Perfection such as a machine delivers would kill it. Unlike other sports, baseball's thrills lie chiefly in the mistakes—when a battery lets a man squeeze home from third or a runner steps into a hotbox.

In any case, it's good to have the season under way. There's nothing like an afternoon at the ball park to clear a man's mind of perennial worries. War clouds, budget qualms and even the forthcoming political contest fade to nothingness with two out in the last half of the ninth and the winning run on base.

China Next?

There was a time when the United States, in company with other powers, enjoyed extraterritorial rights in China, Japan, Egypt, Turkey, Siam, Morocco and other lands.

In those countries foreigners were granted a privileged status, outside and beyond the jurisdiction of the native laws and courts. But during the past half century this relic of medievalism has disappeared in one country after another. Extraterritorial rights have been terminated so far as Japan, Siam and Turkey are concerned, and are about to be relinquished in Egypt.

Now the French government is pressing for the abolition of similar privileges in Morocco. Already its pleas have met with a favorable response in London and may before long meet with a favorable response here. And with the abolition of extraterritoriality in Morocco, China will be the only major area where the system will continue to be in force.

It is obvious, however, that extraterritoriality is also on the way out there. The magnificent unity displayed by the Chinese during the nine months of the present undeclared war suggests that it will not be long before all the old arguments in favor of continuance of extraterritorial rights will cease having any validity.

A strong China will be strong enough to give adequate protection to foreigners living within its borders. At any rate it is doubtful whether this derogation of sovereignty will long survive the end of the present war.

The Anglo-Italian Pact.

Great Britain and Italy did more than bury the hatchet on Easter Sunday. They also closed an era. For the Anglo-Italian accord means the definite and final liquidation of the system of collective security which statesmen in Great Britain—from Lloyd George to Neville Chamberlain—had consistently proclaimed the sheet anchor of British policy. Now about the only function left for the League in the political sphere is to pave the way for the recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

What Great Britain has substituted for the League system, the Rome accord clearly reveals, is power politics of the old-fashioned type. In 1904 Great Britain and France made peace at the expense of Egypt and Morocco and, three years later, Great Britain and Russia made peace at the expense of Persia. Now the Rome and London governments have agreed to preserve peace at the expense of Ethiopia and Spain and some assorted Arabian kingdoms.

Unlike the Anglo-Italian gentleman's agreement of January, 1937, the present accord does not suffer from vagueness. It is concrete and comprehensive. Having thrown all elements of friction between them into one pot, they have achieved a compromise so far-reaching that it cannot be dismissed as just another scrap of paper. On the contrary, within the limits of its nature it is both realistic and constructive. For the time being, at least, the two nations are planning to live at peace. And if they do, it will definitely lead to an easing of the troubled international situation.

Certainly there can be no mistaking the fact that so long as Italo-British relations were on tenterhooks with regard to Spain, Ethiopia, Libya, Yemen, Saudi Arabia, the Red Sea and so on the possibilities of general conflict were greater than they will be if the two nations again become friendly. And since France may soon follow Britain's lead and also come to terms with Italy, something like a new Concert of Europe, a diplomatic device that long antedated the League, may come into being.

This is more likely, at the moment, than the re-creation of a new Stresa front directed against Germany. For Italy, at this time, has little to gain by incurring Hitler's enmity. There is, on the other hand, something to be gained by keeping the Berlin-Rome axis intact.

Whether a new Concert of Europe could keep the peace is, however, an open question. Now as ever Germany remains the key to the European puzzle of peace or war. Further expansion by the Third Reich would unquestionably upset the apple cart. But an attempt is now definitely to be made to bring Germany within the charmed circle.

There is little idealism in these maneuverings. It is old-fashioned diplomacy of a hard-boiled variety. Great Britain has, in one fell swoop, scrapped both the non-recognition policy and the non-intervention policy. She is as definitely off the gold standard of international morality as she is off the gold standard in matters of currency. In both cases governments were elected to carry out a policy which force of circumstances compelled them to scrap.

And it is a curious quirk of fate that it was none other than Sir Eric Drummond, now Lord Perth, who signed the Rome accord after having spent some of the best years of his life building up the League.

Found In A Bottle.

On Easter Sunday 34 years ago, one Edmund Joseph Nolan, 19, of Staten Island, N. Y., hid a bottle containing a note in the foundations of a public library then building. A few days ago WPA workmen razing the structure uncovered it and the letter—"To whom it may concern"—has been published.

After requesting that he be notified on discovery of the bottle (he cannot today be located), Nolan tried to paint a picture of that day for a generation yet unborn. Plainly his aim was to astound his future unknown readers with a realization of the changes which have overtaken the world since 1904. But the plan came off badly. True, Santos-Dumont's dream of flying has by now been achieved. But "perpetual motion has not been discovered" even yet. And in other important respects the world closely resembles that of Nolan's day.

Like Mr. Hull, Secretary of State Hay was then protesting the persecution of racial minorities in Europe while simultaneously negotiating a settlement of American claims in Mexico. Reciprocity was also a concern of the State Department, with a Cuban treaty under study. Alaskan waters were disturbed at the time by a disagreement over sealing (as contrasted with salmon fishing) rights. Britain and Germany—the latter openly—were sedulously promoting their nationals' interests in South America.

At home, Congress was grappling with the problem of railroad rates, finally passing the Elkins act. The Supreme Court was hearing Negro protests of discrimination. The Mississippi and its tributaries had overflowed their banks disastrously and an epidemic of strikes was sweeping the country. Why, there was even a Roosevelt on the threshold of the White House in 1904.

No, Eddie boy, it's like the Frenchman says: "The more things change the more they are the same."

Spending Bill Strategy.

Opposition to President Roosevelt's spending program appears to be steadily growing as the debate proceeds. An enormous number of thoughtful citizens in all parts of the country are obviously worried over the probable results of another pump-priming venture at the expense of future taxpayers. A rising tide of opposition in Congress is evident. Yet it is generally assumed that the spending-lending bill will be enacted.

This belief is based largely upon the usual popularity of spending measures just prior to Congressional elections. Congressmen will undoubtedly be tempted to vote for a bill that may permit favored projects in their districts to go forward. Adjournment without passing some sort of positive recovery measure would be a major political blunder. Moreover, a large number of both Senators and Representatives who helped to defeat the Supreme Court and Executive reorganization bills may now feel the need of demonstrating their devotion to the New Deal in other matters.

These and other political factors must be taken into account in calculating the strength of the current pump-priming movement. On the other hand, there are powerful forces working against it. Extravagant Government outlays to create prosperity are even more unpopular with the rank and file of voters than they have previously been. The most recent poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows a vote of 79 per cent in favor of helping business by reducing taxes as against 21 per cent for more governmental spending.

Congressmen who must soon return to face their constituents will not overlook the significance of this vote of no confidence in the theory of spending for recovery. In recent months Congress has shown itself more amenable to public opinion than to the influence of the White House. Difficult as it may now appear to save the country from another spree of Federal extravagance, the prospect is more encouraging than was the outlook for preservation of judicial independence 14 months ago. The outcome of the approaching struggle will depend largely upon the strategy followed and upon the response from the country.

Republican opposition to the spending program is certain to be strong, as indicated by Senator Vandenberg's debate with Senator Hill, by former Gov. Landon's statement and the speech of John Hamilton, chairman of the G. O. P. National Committee. To be effective, however, the opposition should not be directed along party lines. Should this be made a partisan fight, the enormous sums requested by the President are certain to be voted. This threatened strain upon the Treasury and deterrent to private enterprise can be avoided only by pursuit of the same careful tactics which defeated the Court and reorganization bills.

Senator Vandenberg emphasized the need for a united effort in tackling the problems of depression. The first step of such a coalition movement ought to be defeat of the pump-priming bill. That will involve painstaking and realistic analysis of the measure, with Republicans aiding chiefly from the background.

The Court bill was defeated by a conscientious exposure of its fallacies. Mr. Roosevelt's second spending program is particularly vulnerable to the same attack. It, too, rests upon a fallacy—that purchasing power last year failed to keep pace with industrial production. The President will find it extremely difficult to sustain that view with facts. Rather the evidence indicates that the slump resulted primarily from the uncertainty and lack of confidence brought about by the Administration's own policies.

If Congress subjects this program to a realistic analysis, therefore, it will find that the spending proposal is not an appropriate remedy for conditions that have brought about the present depression. It will find, moreover, that the people are overwhelmingly opposed to any further pump-priming venture. In other words, the two foremost weaknesses of the Court bill, and to some extent the reorganization bill, are also present in the Administration's spending program. That gives Congress a good opportunity—after approving necessary relief outlays—to reject pump-priming as the first step toward more constructive recovery efforts.

A bottle made of glass that has almost as much resiliency as rubber has been invented by some one—probably an umpire.

Irresistible Icebreaker.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In a recent one of its celebrated competitions, the New Statesmen and Nation of London offered prizes for the best new conversational openings its readers could send in. The contest editor wanted icebreakers to replace such bromides as "Lovely (or beastly) weather we're having" and "Read any good books lately?" He received some gems. "I wonder when beards will come into fashion again?" received a prize, and so did "Do you have interesting dreams?" Other sure-fire openings were, "Have you been ill lately?" and "You're like someone in a film I once saw." Flattery was the motif of another, "Have you begun to write your autobiography yet?" And surely few could resist such a provocative statement as "You remind me of my great-aunt, the detective."

These are well and good to dissolve the solemnity of our British cousins' parties, but we in America need no such artificial formulas to start things off. A line is available here that never fails to launch the most laconic into eloquence and to touch off a lively debate that lasts until time to go home. It has the added beauty of being capable of use time and again and in any group. We offer for sure results the remark, "Well, what do you think of F. D. R.'s latest?"

Dr. Smith's Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the press of April 16, I was reported as the single dissenter at the hearing of the Senate committee to consider the advisability of closing the National Training School for Girls. I urged that it should be closed as an institution for colored girls. However, I would like to make it very plain to the interested public, that my conviction was reached months before my summary dismissal as superintendent, and that my ideas and reasons for those ideas had been conveyed to the director of Public Welfare.

It is regrettable, to say the least of it, that a Congressional committee should draw its conclusions from a group of people not one of whom has had any practical experience in correctional schools. If, however, their idea is that the plant would be completely abandoned, the money spent on it during the last two years wasted, and the girls simply turned loose, it should be pointed out that contractual arrangements can be easily made with other schools in nearby States for a temporary period, and that the property on Conduit road could well be used for the Industrial Home School for White Children, now located on Wisconsin avenue.

Such a plan would effect a saving for the taxpayers and have the added advantage of assigning the girls in small groups according to their needs, and subjecting them to more constructive discipline than they could possibly receive under the present circumstances.

There is no economy in throwing good money after bad, and the history of the National Training School for Girls is a 40-year record of waste and futility. Senator Thomas and Representative Collins did a real service to the cause when they eliminated it. When an infected appendix has been removed, no doctor would think of grafting it on again.

There is certainly reason to believe that Congress will not stop with the radical action of a few weeks ago, but will concern itself with the provision of a real industrial school for colored children at Blue Plains. The sale of the Wisconsin avenue property would yield ample funds for such an institution, without costing the taxpayers one additional cent, if used judiciously. This school for colored children should be administered by a colored staff, and conducted as an educational institution.

Tip To Candidates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is a tip to candidates for office in the next elections.

We may not bother to ask what party you belong to, but only these questions:

Are you for American principles of government? Are you against sneaking around our Constitution by slick legal methods? Do you believe that you are simply a trustee of the people—trustee of their money, too, and answerable to them if you squander it—even though you mean well? Are you against dividing our country by speeches arousing class hatred? Are you against kidding the ignorant into believing that the rich pay the bill, when you know "taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors?" Are you against spending (for current expenses) money taken from the pockets of employers and laborers (for old-age security) when you know they don't expect to be taxed again for the same amount?

Do you believe in changing governmental policies this way and that way until no sane man will invest in long-time ventures? Do you believe it is silly to burn down the house to roast a pig? Do you believe the way to get prosperous is to spend everything you have and borrow everything you can—and soak the people for interest on their own money? Do you believe Government credit will hold up long under such a policy? Do you believe in writing up our laws so that the people can understand their own laws? Are you against the Government using our money to compete with us in business?

In short, do you believe in good old American horse sense and integrity? That's what we want to know. Use common sense in answering these questions. Then make one widely publicized speech and take a vacation until the votes are counted.

"Worthwhile Things."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Condemning pump-priming, "A. S. L." states, "Billions have been spent with nothing to show for them." He suggests the money should have been spent for armaments and other worthwhile things.

Ye gods, did we not spend money for armaments during the war? Where are the materials now?

Insofar as "other worthwhile things" are concerned what does "A. S. L." call the Triborough and Golden Gate bridges, the hospitals, schools, streets, park improvements, sewerage systems and treatment plants that have been built?

"No Smearing License."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly allow me to commend Mr. Francis M. Goss for his splendid letter to The Post of a recent date under the title of "White House Vultures."

It is precisely what every wage earner and many others think who appreciate the noble and humane effort President Roosevelt has made to ameliorate the conditions of millions of our unfortunate citizens. These people don't belong to the prosperous class, or the class that amasses profit at the expense of the worker, or the class that when called upon to give a little in taxes criticizes the man who through these taxes is trying to give these unfortunates an opportunity to achieve more life.

Free speech and free journalism are indeed grand, but they must not be confused with a license to besmear.

Reactions To New Spending Program.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More debt. More squandering. Complete repudiation of economy pledges made no later than last fall. Back to the principles of the inflationary NRA—root of present troubles. Nothing even close to budget balance to be hoped for; the mere promise now a travesty. The foisting of reforms that have failed, defeated their own purposes in advance. Borrowing at or near the saturation point, eloquently forecasting what the future may hold in store.

Such are the salient features, beneath the suave verbiage, of the latest Roosevelt chat.

To those untutored minds unable at any time since inception to detect merit in the New Deal spree, the latest "plans" disclosed simply convey: We have failed and have no apologies to offer for failure. The measure of that failure is the adoption of schemes of extensive borrowing and unbridled spending that have already produced the crop of failures—plunging business confidence and recuperative impulse to a new low—by which the New Deal may be distinguished.

No, nothing sound, lasting, constructive or helpful to recovery will ever come out of the New Deal—though an awakened Congress acting independently under prod of an aroused public opinion can repair some of the damage, restore incentive whereby the natural forces of recovery may be encouraged to operate again.

WALTER BAHNSEN.
Washington, April 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How is it that the President does not insist that England pay her debt in this emergency? He could use that money to prime his pump and give relief to the people, instead of rushing us into further debt. England has just announced an enormous surplus in her treasury, and is even offering loans to Europe. This is shameful, for it is our money, and we need it badly now.

Since the President is doing nothing toward collecting from this rich debtor who can well pay now, let the people take up the matter and deluge Congressmen and Senators with letters insisting that the debt be called.

L. V. DANVERS.
Boston, Mass., April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: De Quincy in his "Confessions of an English Opium Eater," written in 1822, described the dreadful habit of opium. He said "the primary effects of opium are always and in the highest degree to excite and stimulate the system." Although during his initial but increasing opium eating of 1816-17, he "judged himself to be a happy man," yet after that came a "long farewell to happiness, smiles, laughter, peace of mind, hope and tranquil dreams." Within four years he reached an "Iliad of woes." No longer having "private activity," he "cursed the spells which chained him down from motion." He seemed "every night to descend into chasms and sunless abysses, depths below depths, from which it seemed hopeless that I ever could reascend."

The spending of increasing billions under President Roosevelt has been quite like the progress of the opium habit as told by De Quincey. The American economic system was at first stimulated or "triggered" into great activity, and then suddenly in 1927 came the "Iliad of woes." To end this the greatest billion-dollar dose yet is now proposed, but this may not stimulate as before. Still greater doses may be required in the future if not to promote any sound prosperity, yet to keep us from economic terrors and tortures in any attempt to let up on the spendings.

American business is like a good old hen which will scratch for a living and lay eggs if you don't chase it around with a big stick, but instead will just leave it alone. If it gets paralyzed in fright, the way to restore it to normalcy is not through nostrums. And the way for it to recover serenity is not through surgery of the ax.

HARRY D. BAKER.
Durham, N. C., April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Grover Cleveland said, "The people should support the Government; not the Government the people." And on this idea the American system was founded. Furthermore, it flourished as no European system had ever flourished because the people ruled. Today the masses are being impregnated with the idea that the Government owes them a living; that the National Treasury can be repeatedly raided with impunity, while States' rights have virtually been rendered obsolete, with the largest bureaucratic machine in history functioning weakly and woefully in Washington.

During the severe depression in the nineties, Cleveland stood like a rock for sound, well-tested principles, while his opponents, who sought to crucify him, clamored for inflation and free spending. As a result of Cleveland's courage, the storm was weathered; the budget remained balanced and an era of prosperity and good fellowship followed.

Throughout the country today leading industrialists continue to wonder why the President doesn't give some definite assurance to business that half-baked, semisocialistic theories will be abandoned, thereby restoring confidence to a fear-stricken nation, breaking "the jam" and releasing frozen capital. If, however, the party in power continues to ignore the fundamental fact that no capitalistic system can function, when paralyzed with dread and fear of the future, the American form of government is on the way out.

The Post Impressionist

The D. A. R.'s

THE Daughters of the American Revolution are again in town and to most Washingtonians it means just so much longer to stand in line at cafeterias, theaters and churches. Seldom do we stop to think that back of the organization is the meaning that each one of these "Daughters" is descended from a man who either fought in the Revolutionary War, or was a recognized patriot, or a woman who did a specific thing at that time.

To many of the Daughters it is just another trip, but to others it is something for which they have saved the entire year. They come from wealthy and humble families, alike. Some are gowned in expensive clothes, while others are dressed inconspicuously. But the Daughter who is descended from the modest village carpenter has as many rights in the organization as the one who springs from a general, and to all it is an annual pilgrimage in which they take justifiable pride.

Inspiration for this great patriotic movement was a letter entitled "Women Worthy of Honor" which appeared in The Post on July 13, 1890, written by Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood.

Mrs. Lockwood, in reading an account of a meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution held in Washington on July 11, 1890, was both interested and incensed by the remarks of Senator Sherman. In her letter to The Post, she quoted from Senator Sherman's speech wherein he expressed approval of any movement that would perpetuate the memories of the heroes of the Revolution, and greeted with pleasure the presence of women at the meeting.

"They might not have done any "fighting," he said (forgetting Deborah Sampson, Molly Pitcher and the women of Pepperell, etc.), "but they kept the farm going—raised the crops that fed the army—spun yarn and wove the cloth that clothed the soldiers—looked after the homes and the children—kept the country alive, and it is most fitting that women should be present here tonight to help commemorate the names of the Sons of the Revolution."

• • • •

"If this be the case," Mrs. Lockwood asked in her letter, "why do men and women band themselves to create a one-sided patriotism? If these were true patriotic women, why is not the patriotism of the country broad and just enough to commemorate the names of women also? Were there not mothers in the Revolution; no dames as well as sires whose memories should be commemorated?"

She then made an appeal to her countrywomen to come forward and bring the names of heroines known to them, that their names might be placed on a roll of honor.

Response was quick, and at Mrs. Lockwood's house in Washington, on October 11, 1890, the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized and was honored in having Mrs. Benjamin Harrison as its first president general. When that first enthusiastic meeting closed there were 18 names enrolled for membership.

• • • •

The resolutions of that first little band are practically the same for the 2,503 chapters, composing 142,744 members, today. Their aims are to use their minds, their hearts and their means to perpetuate the memory of the spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence; to encourage the study of history, the enlightenment of our foreign population, and all that makes for good citizenship; to foster true patriotism and love of country and aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

Especially do they resolve to carry out the injunction of Washington in his Farewell Address to the American people, "to promote, as an object of prime importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge."

• • • •

Reports from the numerous chapters show that they carry out these resolutions. They locate the graves of soldiers and mark them. They collect old records, place memorial tablets and mark historic spots. Historical essay contests are conducted. Food and clothing are given to individuals and organizations. Chapters are organized to combat illiteracy and talks on good citizenship are given. Scholarships are awarded and they contribute to schools. Many of the chapters "adopt" boys and girls and send them to approved schools.

These reports are delivered one night during the annual D. A. R. Congress. Closing nights of these assemblies are gala affairs. Brilliant and thrilling is the scene as they march up the aisle, proudly carrying the flags that mean so much to all of us, whether we "belong" or not.

Me may smile a bit as the Daughters bustle about and practically take possession of the city during their sojourn in Washington, but if it is an understanding smile. There are few who do not have the envious wish that they, too, had the right to belong to an organization whose members have descended from many of the founders of this Nation.

Court Presentations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to commend the Hon. Joseph Kennedy, Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, for his courageous action in putting a crimp in court presentations of Americans.

Our ancestors, if they knew how their descendants squander American wealth to uphold the decaying aristocracy of Europe, which they bitterly fought against, would turn in their graves.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Moderation For All.

AM I NUTS or did I hear little Joe Goebbels speaking the other night in that portion of the Fireside Chat where Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Every patriotic citizen must say to himself or herself that immoderate statement, appeals to prejudice and the creation of unkindness are offenses not against an individual or individuals, but offenses against the whole population of the United States . . . self-restraint implies restraint by articulate public opinion, trained to distinguish fact from falsehood, trained to believe that bitterness is never a useful instrument in public affairs."

PEGLER.

Mr. Goebbels is the Nazi minister of propaganda and public enlightment who prevents immoderate statements, appeals to prejudices and the creation of unkindness in Germany except by Hitler, Julius Streicher, himself and other privileged members of the administration, and justifies this suppression on the ground of patriotism and national unity.

In our country in the last few years the most influential appeals of prejudice in the general clamor raised by an excited and confused people have come from the man who now condemns all this and from members of his Administration, notably Harold Ickes. Such phrases as "economic royalist" and "well-fed clubmen" ring out of the past along with the memorable quotation about the rich riding in carriages and drinking wine which was delivered, incidentally, by a miracle of timing on the very same day that dispatches from abroad described an incident on the French Riviera in which a rich young American, riding in a carriage, poured wine from a bottle into the local mayor's plug hat.

AGREED that immoderate and exciting utterances create that bitterness which is never a useful instrument in public affairs, it must be asked now whether this passage was intended to convey an admission of past guilt and a promise of reform as a sedative for others. If so, there is less cause for concern than if Mr. Roosevelt holds himself and Ickes, with his inflammatory remarks about the 60 families, to have been innocent of language which offends against the whole population of the United States. If the President believes that the Administration has been innocent of immoderate speech, then that suggests that here, as in Germany and Italy, violent and provocative utterances may be used by the Government to create patriotic resentment against legitimate criticism of the Government and its personages.

Personalizing his appeal just as he personalized his implication of immoral and unethical conduct against individuals who had complied with the income tax laws, Mr. Roosevelt puts every citizen on the alert to resent, as an offense against the national security, any written or spoken utterance which that citizen believes to be immoderate. Every man thus becomes his own judge of moderation and excess, which is no new thing, to be sure, but with a mission now to rebuke somehow the expression of opinions or representations with which he disagrees.

Nobody can attempt to deny that the last five years have evoked some of the most absurd proposals that ever jangled the air we breathe and fouled up newsprint made from noble trees which deserved a better end.

COUGHLIN, Townsend, Huey Long, and a hundred other political and economic wild men have whooped the multitudes into sweaty lathers with their dangerous magnetism and their dream pictures of that happy land where highballs roll on the ground.

Some publishers have been viciously partisan against the President, just as others have betrayed their trust and have reserved to lose their franchises for selling out to evils of the New Deal in return for expensive local luxuries and needless improvements bought with Treasury money. But to say that moderation must now commence and must be enforced is to borrow a paragraph from the book of Goebbels if it is intended to set suspicion against critics of the Administration without similar scrutiny of the Government's own utterances.

I agree that it is just too bad that this Nation, with so many external enemies, is twisting its own foot with an excruciating toe-hold and think we ought to let go. But Mr. Roosevelt should have dropped in at least one clarifying phrase to assure us that moderation is expected of us all from the President down, if that is what he meant.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Sailing, Sailing."

("I propose to sail ahead. For, to reach a port we must sail—sail, not lie at anchor; sail, not drift."—Mr. Roosevelt.)

The President:

Come on, all hands! We're shoving off!
The thing to do is sail;
I like to see the green seas come
Awashing o'er the rail!
To lie at anchor is absurd
If skies be blue or gray;
Let's have no drifting at the buoy—
We must get under way!

Republican Chorus:

He wants to go a-sailing, boys,
A-sailing he would go
Regardless of the heavy seas
And scoffing at the blow;
Oh, see him at the tiller, boys—
How carefree and how gay!
But what a bill for sailing we
Will some day have to pay!

The President:

We must not fail to catch the tide,
To fight one is no sport;
To miss a tide most always means
To also miss the port;
So pipe all hands on deck, my lads,
And give each line a test!
Pull up the anchor quickly for
We're very late at best!

Republican Chorus:

Oh hear him talk of catching tides!
It must be just a gift;
For six long months he was content
To hesitate and drift;
He bids us rush the head-sheets up
And batten down the hatch,
But what we'd like to know is just
What tide he wants to catch.

The President:

What are these protests that I hear?
Is this a mutiny?
You know the penalty for that
By all the rules of sea;
Get up the anchor smartly there!
We soon will clear the bar;
I don't know where we're going but
We can't stay where we are.

Republican Chorus:

We can't stay where we are, 'tis true,
But shout it loudly, men,
It is a pity that we could
Not stay where we have been.
It is this sudden rush to sail
That puts us in a huff;
We have a firm conviction that
The water's far too rough.

Priming The Pump

Supporters Of New Spending Program Seen As Varied In Their Arguments As Opponents Who Had Clung To Morgenthau.

By Herbert M. Bratter.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

RECENT EVENTS, culminating in the President's relief and pump-priming message and fireside chat, have brought to the fore proposals of heavy new public spending. The occasion for this is the very serious economic relapse the country has experienced since Labor Day. In rapidity and depth the declines in business and industrial activity, and the increase in unemployment have exceeded those of the corresponding period of the 1929 collapse. Hence the renewed pressure to spend our way back to better times, to spend the gold foreigners sent here for temporary investment to make bank reserves more plentiful and easy money easier, and to increase the public debt.

The "spenders" are not a homogeneous group. They have differing motives. This fact does not impair their working together now, although it does imply a parting of their paths later on. The anti-spenders, also, reach their joint conclusion via divers paths, and their ranks are diminished by defection as circumstances change.

The foremost group of spenders we may term the "social workers." Their thesis is to take care of the hungry and needy, now and always. So long as there are unemployed or unemployables, this group believes they must be cared for. It believes that such people are dependents of Uncle Sam and must obtain income from him. It is not much concerned where the money which is given those dependents comes from. To this group relief money is simply an order on the local butcher, the grocer and the landlord, and if it cannot be taken out of tax revenues it must be borrowed or printed. The argument that the hungry must eat is cogent.

Note well that, according to the social workers, relief expenditures should be made in times of good business as well as bad, so long as needed. It is in this respect that the "social workers" differ from pure pump-primers.

Pump-Primers Seek Stimulus To Business.

THE PUMP-PRIMERS hold that the economic machine is temporarily out of tune. Relationships between different groups have become unbalanced and many consumers are undersupplied with resources or purchasing power, while the producers group is oversupplied. The "fly-wheel" of industry is at dead center; if we crank it by hand it will soon take hold and hum along by itself, they say. True, we did crank it in 1933 and subsequently and it did seem to take hold. But when we practically stopped helping it in 1937 it slowed down. So we should crank it again. Then business will pick up, people will get more work, and the unemployment problem will diminish. Whenever business slumps, spend, and whenever it revives strongly, stop spending.

Thus, whereas the social workers tackle the obvious surface indications of the business slump, the humans affected, the pump-primers go at the machine itself. They deal in index numbers more than in people. Both these groups are represented among the President's many advisers. Typical of the first is Mr. Harry Hopkins. Typical of the second is Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve System, advocate of a managed, compensated economy.

There is also a third important group inclined toward spending and job making—Congressmen and others directly or indirectly dependent upon the voters. Government spending for relief and work relief, and Federal loans to local governments and other groups bring popularity to those guiding the purse strings. This is an election year. All Representatives and one third of the Senators are approaching the expiration of their terms. It would be only natural for them to take into consideration the vote-gathering qualities of relief and pump-priming. Such money is "twice blessed. It blesseth him that gives and him that takes."

To be noted also among the advocates of spending are those who have a vested interest in Government orders—the manufacturers and dealers in road-making machinery, cement and other public-works materials—or in the sale of consumers goods to recipients of Government checks. Nor should we forget those within the Government who have an intellectual vested interest in one theory or another of Government relief.

To spend now is thus popular with all these groups, and with their numerous adherents throughout the country. For the present all their paths coincide.

THE OPPONENTS of spending similarly have various viewpoints and motives. Some are taxpayers who desire to ease their own burden. Others not less directly interested, are impressed with the consequences of unbalanced budgets abroad. Deficit financing by means of funds technically borrowed from banks, but actually newly created with a stroke of the deposit-teller's pen against a continuous stream of Government interest-bearing I. O. U.'s is regarded as pointing to inevitable financial collapse.

Holders of Government bonds, including not only the banks, but also individuals, insurance companies, educational and other institutions, savings banks, and all those interested in such enterprises, are all concerned lest the value of their holdings be diluted and depreciated as happened in the European post-war spending orgy. Spending our way out of depression with bonds seems little better than doing so with greenbacks, with silver, or any other form of fiat currency.

These antispenders are joined by others, less detailed in their reasoning, who simply fear that large-scale spending — "unorthodox finance"—will cause the value of money to sink and the prices of things to soar. They fear that repeated deficits may lead to extreme currency depreciation. While that hasn't happened yet, it is something to keep in mind.

Again, among the budget balancers are those who view large Federal relief and pump-priming instead of local relief activity as a big step toward centralization and dictatorship. Such spending, they say, provides those in power with an effective means of self-perpetuation in office. The party in power can thus buy up a sufficient fraction of the voters to insure its re-election.

Moreover, large-scale Government work relief is claimed to have definitely harmful effects. It accustoms many people to lazy working conditions. It tends at times to discourage private employment by paying high wages for inferior or inconsequential public work. It gives the Government control over individual businesses, prices, wage rates and working conditions through its purchases of materials, for the Government is such a large-scale buyer it easily becomes the dominant customer. Those who fear these effects on business are joined by others from among those who oppose the present Administration for political reasons, by those who think that freeing business from the controls and regulation now prevailing will reopen private opportunities of employment, and by those who are opposed to large-scale relief and work relief as deadening to individual initiative and enterprise.

Spenders Have Won White House Approval.

THE SPENDERS have apparently prevailed at the White House over the budget balancers. The President has sent their recommendation to Congress and to the country. If the response is favorable, as may be expected, the spending program will be adopted. Millions and billions will be pushed out over the course of the next fiscal year. If business later improves, sentiment on spending may change rather quickly.

Although it seems longer, it is only five months since Secretary Morgenthau—speaking for the Administration—publicly rejected "another great spending program" and expressed his firm conviction that domestic problems required a determined movement toward a balanced budget. The moral is not that the Secretary was insincere in November, but rather that he was outvoted in April and that public policy is subject to change without notice.

Mexico Next?

From The New Statesman And Nation.

Saturnino Cedillo.

A FASCIST REVOLT, similar to that which took place in Spain, is today threatening Mexico. Important capitalist interests are gathering their resources round a conservative military leader and, as in Spain, small shopowners, industrialists, clergymen, army cliques and aristocratic remnants are preparing for a revolt which will be represented as a necessity to "free Mexico from Communism." Scattered and leaderless during the first two years of Cardenas' administration, these conservative groups look increasingly to Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, dictator of the State of San Luis Potosi and last of Mexico's local strong men. Under Cedillo, they look for relief from the strict regulations and governmental controls placed over their economic life by the Cardenas administration.

On the other side the trade unions, which have grown stronger during the administration of Cardenas and which are now led by Toledano Lombardo, are arming and drilling. Peons are organizing themselves into agricultural shock troops, ready to fight for the government that gave them back their land. The clenched fist, symbol of the united front, is making its appearance in public.

GEN. SATURNINO CEDILLO, in succession a bandit, revolutionary hero, unchallenged autocrat of San Luis Potosi and finally minister of agriculture in President Cardenas' cabinet, first came into prominence in the revolution of 1910. A proud, gusty mestizo, overfond of women and good times generally, he fought his way slowly to the top in San Luis Potosi, occupying for a time a lieutenancy in the bandit army of Pancho Villa. Once at the top, his enthusiasm for radical reform waned, a trait of most Mexican revolutionists.

Conscious of the heroic part he had played in the turbulent days of Madero, Carranza, Huerta and Obregon, he began to look with disdain on the "social consciousness" of the newer "intellectual" type of young Mexican revolutionary who had "shed no blood for Mexico." Nevertheless, as a member of the National Revolutionary Party, he took part in the convention of 1934, which drafted the six-year plan for the economic reform of Mexico and nominated Lazaro Cardenas for the presidency. As an opponent of Calles, who originally was the power behind Cardenas, and who was suddenly disowned by Cardenas, Cedillo received the post of minister of agriculture after Cardenas' election.

The most conservative member of the cabinet, Cedillo gradually drifted farther from the purposes and aims of the new government. Each time Cardenas put into execution one of the reform measures promised by the six-year plan, Cedillo opposed. He resisted most strongly when Cardenas bucked the big oil companies of Great Britain and the United States.

As a result of this policy of sniping from within, Cedillo rapidly gained the hatred of the more radical of Cardenas followers and the blessings of the much-mauled aristocracy, large landholders and industrialists. Eventually the split came, cleaving Mexico suddenly into the same two camps which today are wreaking havoc in Spain.

• • • •

FOLLOWING Cedillo's resignation from the cabinet, Cardenas had to move quickly. Able to count on the support of most of the workers and peons, he knew that the real danger lay in the possibility that Cedillo would be able to win over the federal army and a large part of the federal bureaucracy. The Mexican army and bureaucracy is like that and always has been. At the drop of a hat, they will run to the side that pays the most.

Moreover, in his own state, Cedillo has a well-armed, well-trained private army of 15,000, ready to move at an instant's command. Cardenas knew that too. He offered Cedillo a foreign post, hoping to get him out of the country. Cedillo refused, saying he found Mexico the most interesting in the world! Cardenas offered to make peace. Cedillo replied in a press statement that he would "do nothing against the government unless the government moves against me."

Today, to the curious and unsympathetic, he (Cedillo) is not at home. He has nothing to say to them and does not wish to be badgered by their questions. To those who have something to offer, however, he is cordial. Numbered among his visitors are individuals mysteriously described as "Nazi and Italian agents." Whoever these visitors are, it is certain they bode no good for the Cardenas administration.

• • • •

HOW POWERFUL the Fascist forces in Mexico are it is hard to estimate. According to Cardenas' supporters, Cedillo will not constitute so great a threat as he might have some years ago. Great improvement in means of communication and transportation throughout Mexico mean that a revolt in one state is futile unless it spreads quickly to other states. Therefore the issue depends on the loyalty of the army and bureaucracy, and the army especially has been badly paid and not enough praised. Cardenas will be in difficulties if he is left dependent on the support of the workers and peasants.

Today both sides are waiting. Money talks, and Cedillo is getting the money. But Cardenas is good at waiting; he caught Calles off his guard and he may also catch Cedillo moving before his psychological moment.

Korea Regimentation

By K. A. Wittfogel

All Heroes Must Be Japanese.

WHAT THE North China towns experience today and what Manchuria has been experiencing for the last six years, Korea has gone through for almost three decades. Textbooks, oral teaching and all forms of utterance outside of school are being regimented.

A Korean preacher in his sermon discussed the kingdom of God. The man was arrested at once and heavily threatened. Did he not realize that there was only one kingdom—the kingdom of Japan? English readers which contain any patriotic "hero stories" have been barred in Korea as "seditious." A translation of some of Kipling's jungle stories was suppressed by the censor, because in one of these stories an elephant refuses to obey his new master.

• • • •

WHEN Japan's army entered Korea, it burned the books which presented Korea's tradition and glory. When Japan's army took Manchuria, it burned the textbooks which inspired the youth of China's three eastern provinces to respect and to rebuild their own country. Now, in Peiping, books are burned, some of them as old as the Sung dynasty, because they contain impolite remarks about the Japanese (whom they call "dwarfs").

Universities are burned and destroyed, and, while Chinese cities and civilians are bombed all over the country, Chinese children are being marched along the streets of Tientsin with Japanese flags in their little hands and compelled to sing the following song, which is reprinted in Cultural Nippon:

"Brave, gallant Japanese soldiers,
Well disciplined Japanese soldiers,
Japanese soldiers we like you,
Happy home life we owe you,
Pleasant school life we owe you . . ."

House Votes to Pay Pershing's Losses

By the Associated Press.

House approval sent to the White House yesterday legislation ordering the Government to pay Gen. John J. Pershing $19,490 to meet losses sustained in foreign countries due to the appreciation of foreign currencies.

The Military Affairs Committee said the War Department had authorized the payment to Pershing while he was in Europe as chairman of the American Battle Monuments Commission. The Comptroller General invalidated the amount, however, on the ground that Pershing was only a retired officer living abroad and not a Government official.

Its better self goes marching on, referring to certain parts of the assassinated Reorganization Bill . . . For the salvaging of Sections 301-302-303, H.R. 8277 and 206 and 207, S-3331, affecting emergency Federal workers, or the writing of a new bill to be presented "by an outstanding member of the House Civil Service Committee" is in a program outlined by Harold P. Thoreson, national president, Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes . . . And from Representative Henry G. Teigan, (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, comes the hope that "an even better Congress will be waiting to receive the employes' bill next session . . .

"You are not beggars; you have something to demand of Congress," Teigan has told the Association. But "no Moses is coming down to lead you, you have to do things yourself. The defeat of the Reorganization Bill came through bad handling and habitual wrong voters voting wrong" . . . Meanwhile, Thoreson is touring the East, whooping up sentiment for the non-classified people . . .

No greater love hath any organization than that it throws a banquet, knowing it will lose $50 at least through the enterprice . . . Such is the Interior Department Recreation Association, which offers a banquet at 6 p. m. Thursday in the Department Cafeteria. The number of seats is limited, so no tickets will be available after noon today . . . Heads of the bureaus will be honor guests; Stanley W. Crosthwait, the president, will present trophies to winning teams in basketball, indoor baseball and men's and women's bowling; there will be entertainment, featured by the Bacone College Glee Club, 20 Indians now touring the East . . .

On the Glee Club are Walter Rattler, Tony Reyna, J. L. Capps, Harvey West, Jack Frost, Richard West, Wilson McLemore, M. B. Donaghey, Howard Marshall, Dennis Groundhog, Ned McFarland, Sandiago Sanchez, Raymond Beardsley, George Smith, Walter Kelley, Chief Saul, James Donaghey, Juan Martinez, Woodrow Wilson, Jesus Balderrama and Hubert Halfmoon.

National Park Service guards, troubled by the Interior Department order that would weed out the physically and mentally unfit—bringing them not only on the carpet, but before a board topped by a psychiatrist—will meet today at 2:30 and 4:30 p. m., under U. F. W. A. auspices, to meet the situation . . . Says the announcement: "It seems obvious that this is very plainly a scheme to thin out the ranks of the NPS . . . Are these men 'crackpots' or are they personally disliked men?" The meetings will be held in the U. F. W. A. headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

In connection with this issue, it might be said that of all the Federal guards in Washington Federal buildings, those in Interior have the most harrassed look. They seem constantly sitting on hard chairs full of pins, briars and needles and as if the eyes of some most terrifying mogul were constantly on them . . . They have been so pulled at, badgered and belabored by those above them (and we're not talking about their superiors in uniform) that actually the poor fellows don't seem to know exactly what to do.

And, we suspect, most of the trouble dates back to the time when the newspapers commented on the Secretary's bathrooms . . . What the guards had to do with that is a little hard to see; but since those days somebody from upstairs has been riding them, scaring them . . . Bring a camera in one of the doors and the men in uniform have everything but apoplexy . . . And they're not that way by personal inclination; almost to a man, they're good fellows and co-operate in anything that's reasonable . . . And if they've been made to clamp down unreasonably, no reasonable man can blame them . . . Certainly, they're in no more need of an examining board and a psychiatrist than any other normal men doing normal work . . . And it is safe to venture that if somebody above them would let them alone they would work with perfect efficiency . . . Maybe, if the board and its psychiatrist began its work from the top the whole difficulty would be found before the investigation ever got down to the guards.

18 Power Firms Assail TVA to Supreme Court

Records So Large Tribunal May Not Decide Issue Before Adjourning.

By the Associated Press.

Hostilities broke out again yesterday between private utilities and the Tennessee Valley Authority, 18 private companies appealing to the Supreme Court to halt the New Deal experiment in regional planning and public power development.

The private companies, mostly subsidiaries of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation and the Electric Bond & Share Co., asked the Court to invalidate the Tennessee Valley Authority act, which, they said, threatened "irreparable injury if not destruction" to their businesses.

The companies appealed from a decision of a three-judge Federal court of appeals at Chattanooga which ruled in January that they were not immune from competition of TVA power "even if their business be curtailed or destroyed."

The appeal was filed during an indefinite recess in negotiations between David E. Lilienthal, TVA director, and Wendell Willkie, president, of Commonwealth and Southern, for the sale of private power systems in the TVA area to TVA and municipal governments.

The record in the case was so large court officials expressed doubt it could be printed in time to permit oral argument of the litigation May 2, as previously expected.

Hospital Group Approves '3 Cts. A Day' Service

Praise Is Extended In 41 Cities To Plan For 'Care Insurance.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—The American Hospital Association, representing 7,000 hospitals in the United States and Canada, today approved New York's 3-cents-a-day plan for group hospital care, at a luncheon meeting of the Associated Hospital Service.

Forty similar approval day ceremonies were held in cities throughout the country.

The approved hospital service plans have more than 1,600,000 members. More than half are residents of New York State.

Dr. C. Rufus Rorem, of Chicago, director of the committee on hospital service of the American Hospital Association, sent his congratulations to Karl Eilers, president of the Associated Hospital Service.

"Hospital care insurance," said the message, "is not a panacea for the public or the hospitals, but it does help the patient by paying his hospital bill, the doctor by increasing the chance of collecting a fee, the taxpayer by removing some people from tax-supported to private hospitals, the businessman by decreasing the need for philanthropy, and the general public by removing the economic barrier to the receipt of hospital care."

D.A.R. Accords An Ovation to 'Attack on 'Isms'

National Defense Session One of the Biggest Ever Held.

Nearly 1,000 Daughters of the American Revolution, gathered at the Mayflower Hotel for their annual National Defense Symposium, yesterday heard pleas for protection of American principles in the fields of religion, economics, Government and foreign policy.

According to President General Mrs. William A. Becker, who paid a brief visit to the meeting, it was one of the largest in D. A. R. history and certainly it was one of the most enthusiastic.

The symposium was conducted by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, national defense chairman. In her opening speech, she pointed out that the national defense committee is not only concerned with encouraging adequate military and naval defense but also studies such vital problems as "youth, the subversive influences luring youth, the growth of the spoils system, the economic situation and the preservation of what we consider the best form of government in the world."

Communism Condemned.

She then introduced Dr. Arthur Deerin Call, who presented greetings from the American Peace Society, of which he is secretary and editor. Other speakers were Mrs. Victoria Booth Demarest, whose subject was "The Threat of Christianity;" Robert L. Johnston, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, and Dr. Ruth Alexander, economist, who discussed "The American Way."

The address by Mrs. Demarest, granddaughter of William and Catherine Booth, founders of the Salvation Army, was interrupted constantly by applause. At its conclusion the Daughters gave the speaker a rising vote to indicate their approval of her description of the dangers confronting religion and their determination to combat the dangers.

"Communism is undoubtedly the greatest enemy today of both God and humanity because it is politically organized atheism," the evangelist declared, condemning the slaughter of Russian Christian and the antichurch activities of the Internationale of the Militant Godless.

Other Isms Scored.

"The church is being whipped because it has discouraged evangelism," she explained. "While the Church of God has been sneering at emotion, the enemies of God have realized that emotion is the greatest power in the world."

Other factors endangering Christianity, Mrs. Demarest went on, are Fascism, Naziism and anti-Semitism. These movements already have pervaded the United States, she believes. She called upon the Daughters to mobilize "the spiritual forces of America" and "drive these materialistic forces out of our land."

Johnson, speaking on "The Demand for a Trained Civil Service," urged expansion of the merit system in order to exclude Government workers "whose sole qualification is that they guessed right in the last election."

Merit System Defended.

"We must wake up and realize that the spoils system is to be attacked as we would attack any subversive philosophy boring into the minds of our people," he went on; "that until it is stamped out, all our ambitious plans for social reform and economic betterment will be frustrated before they are well begun."

In response to a question at the close of his speech, he expressed disapproval of veteran preference in civil service examinations. A veteran himself, he declared he did not go to France "in order to get special privileges when I got back."

His viewpoint was combated by an unidentified daughter, who declared her belief that America's soldiers gave their all and should receive something in return.

The meeting ended with Dr. Alexander's scholarly defense of capitalism as the only economic system under which democracy can survive. Capitalism, she believes, "offers the fact of freedom in place of the promise of security."

She urged her hearers to ignore the "bedtime stories of a 'planned' society, a Cinderella civilization, where we'll all live happily ever after, for the clock will never strike 12. Our imagination is inflamed, and he who knows the art of capturing man's imagination knows the art of governing them."

In a question period which followed, one member of the audience suggested that copies of Dr. Alexander's address be mailed to all members of Congress.

One of the interesting exhibits in Memorial Continental Hall is that of prize-winning dresses made by girls in the Girls' Home-makers Contest sponsored by the D. A. R. this year. Mrs. Lester S. Daniel, of Somerville, Mass., is national chairman of this department of the organization and Mrs. Clarence Green is State chairman for New York, which boasted first prize winner not only in dress making but in a menu contest. Girl Scouts, 4-H Club members and students of home economics comprised the largest number of girls who entered their work, although it was open to any who desired to compete.

Victoria Bednarz, of Rome N. Y., won first place in dressmaking with a yellow shantung dress, blanket-stitched around the sleeves and collar, which is on display. Jane C. Hope, of Cobleskill, N. Y., won the food contest on a series of menus planned for a family of four on a weekly budget of $10.

Prizes will be presented to the chapter regents today at the New York delegation's luncheon at the Mayflower and given to the girls

3,500 Delegates Are Received By Mrs. Robert

Function Sets Pace for D. A. R. Entertaing During Session.

Mrs. Robert, heading the receiving line, wore a gown of white, severely plain, and carried white orchids. Introductions were made by Mrs. Wilbur Blakslee, of Maryland, gowned in powder blue lace. Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, retiring regent of Kansas and candidate for chaplain general, stood next to Mrs. Robert, and wore white crepe, ornamented with Japanese embroidery. Others were Mrs. John S. Heaume, of Springfield, Ohio, candidate for recording secretary general, in dusty pink; Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, jr., of Clarksdale, Miss., Candidate for corresponding secretary general, in white mousseline de soie; Mrs. George D. A lecture course on "Parliamentary Procedure," available to all members, will be given by Mrs. John Trigg Moss, D. A. R. parliamentarian, during the Congress.

She will present an hour's lecture in the ballroom of Memorial Hall today, tomorrow and Thursday, beginning at 8 a. m. It is believed the course will be of much value to members in the conduct of D. A. R. affairs and it is expected that many will take advantage of the opportunity.

The president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, addressed the pages at their preliminary meeting yesterday afternoon in the auditorium of Constitution Hall, telling them that her interest in the activities of the Daughters of the American Revolution began years ago, when she came to Washington as a page. Miss Dorothy Jenkins, of Philadelphia, chairman of pages, presided. Mrs. Becker has as her personal page her young neice, Miss Beryl Hague, of Roseland, N. J.

A welcome sign to many hungry Daughters was a large red, white and blue poster in the corridor of Continental Hall, yesterday, announcing that luncheon was being served downstairs. Montgomery Chapter, D. A. R., of Washington, was serving in cafeteria style. Small tables were arranged with spring flowers and lighted candles as the decorations and many informal luncheon groups were formed by officers and delegates who discussed business of the Congress over their paper plates.

It is well to know at least the rudiments of the multiplication table in appraising the Messrs. Shubert's production of "Three Waltzes," which was presented for the first time in Washington in the National Theater last night. "Three Waltzes" is rather better than a consistent triple threat.

Embodied in its dramatic structure is approximately three times the substantial timber usually bestowed upon an operetta; with Johann Strauss, sr., providing the musical setting for the first period of the story, Johann, jr., the melodious investiture of the second, and Oscar Straus contributing the lilting compositions for the third, there is no paucity of what someone has described as "the concord of sweet sound."

Added to all that are a cast, chorus and material production that elevate this offering beyond the realm of operetta almost into the latterly abandoned field of legitimate light opera.

There is about "Three Waltzes" something of the flavor of Noel Coward's "Bittersweet," the memorable "Fredericka," "Anina" and "The Great Waltz,' in that the present work covers the theatrical adventures of three generations of stage and opera stars and their royal admirers from the House of Hohenbrunn—which might easily have been the Hapsburgs, since the opening interval of the play is laid in Vienna in 1865. The penultimate developments of the second act are in Paris in 1900 and the third and final chapter of the story has its locale in London in 1937.

Sound Romance—Fine Music.

Into the warp and woof of this admirable figment's fabric have been woven such a wealth of sound romance, so much beautiful music and such diversity of development and action that it is difficult to find a point at which to begin in any orderly recital of the operetta's content.

It is heavily saturated with all of the lighter musical merits without ever suggesting audience satiety. One evening finds it difficult to accommodate all of the entertainment that is here provided, as may, perhaps be attested by the fact that last night's final curtain was not down until 11:30—and then only after the members of the cast and ensemble had been accorded six rousing curtain calls, a remarkable tribute to an offering of this character, for which there is an ample measure of approval.

"Three Waltzes," it should be understood, is not a modern musical comedy or a revue in the accepted sense. It is a firmly founded musical romance adapted from a play, by Paul Knepler and Armin Robinson, by Clare Kummer and Rowland Leigh that has been made the beneficiary of the Shuberts' most painstaking effort. The singing of the principal roles is handsomely accomplished and the piece is acted and danced with picturesqueness, spontaneity and enthusiasm. The settings and costumes are colorful and in the spirit of their respective periods and the whole gay and nostalgic affair partakes generously of an earlier day in the theater that until now seemed definitely and lamentably to have been written into the past tense.

Staged With Opulence.

"Three Waltzes" is not projected before an audience before velvet drapes, silks and satins. The production is heavy with the "stick" scenery of an earlier era, and generous use is made of "scrim" drops to lend depth to many multiple scenes and added point to the romantic aspects of the tale that is both spoken and sung. In the second act the fabled Parisian "can-can," of a half century ago, is revived with a realistically surprising effect that overwhelmed last night's audience and sent many eyes roving over the program to see who the beautiful girls engaged in its slightly violent execution might be.

But, after all, it is the music of the various Strausses, of various spellings, that form the groundwork of this chromatic recital of the amorous inclinations of three generations. Kitty Carlisle and Michael Bartlett, both of the cinema, seemed to prove last evening that the musical stage is their proper metier. They sang entrancingly, singly and together, although there always was the slight implication that their duets were more in the nature of duels of high notes. Neither faltered and their voices blend with uncommon beauty.

In the exposition of the dramatic trends of the narrative, Glen Anders, Ruth Hammond and Marguerita Sylva, former star of opera and operetta—Miss Sylva retaining all of the statuesque beauty that made her the international toast of her day, incidentally—Freddy Sherman, former National Theater Players favorite—George Baxter and Louis Sorin easily assumed first honors.

Among the dancers, Rosie Moran, even with a bandaged ankle, proved herself an acrobatic marvel. All of the "ladies of the ensemble," at one time or another, did the same thing. Their bouncing "splits" in that "can-can" number were something to see!

There is too much in "Three Waltzes" to be detailed in a hurried midnight review. There is only one minor detail that I feel disposed to stress and that is not to miss it.

'The Birth of a Baby' Arouses Debate As Season's Most Controversial Film

Clinical Production Seems Not to Be Ideally Suited to Entertainment of Masses in Commercial Theaters, Although Reverently Made; Mr. Miles Drops by After Traveling Miles for "Tobacco Road;" Notes.

FOR many days now there has been reposing on my desk a four-page, pictorial "broadside" on that widely, and at times bitterly, discussed motion picture of "The Birth of a Baby," reproductions from which sold out a recent issue of Life and placed an exorbitant price upon any recoverable copies of the magazine.

BELL.

The controversy aroused by this film has been acute and acrimonious. In some areas the picture has been barred from public presentation. In others it has merely been the topic of a tremendous divergence of opinion.

Those who have seen the film—and I have not—seem to be adamant in their opinion that it is a salutary and valuable contribution to the knowledge of the world—particularly to those of the so-called gentler sex who at some time may expect to bear offspring.

Others who have viewed the screen depiction of the fundamental function of the feminine gender have expressed to me the impression that it is a subject that will imbue fear in the heart of any woman about to bear a child, and, therefore, is not so salutary as it might be.

As between these opinions, not having seen the picture, I am unable to render a valid verdict on its presentability as an item of general entertainment.

On the basis of the evidence afforded by the aforementioned four-page "broadside" from the magazine, however, I am able to form a nebulous sort of impression of the effect this picture would have on a mixed audience of amusements-seekers, many of whom might be young and not too well acquainted. It seems to me that this "Birth of a Baby" business is a trifle too revelatory to be the ideal medium of adolescent entertainment.

The picture has been made in a spirit of obvious anxiety to bring to the screen one of the most sacred events known to mankind; it has been hedged about by all of the scientific and medical bulwarks that possibly could contribute to its authenticity. Whether it is fostered by acquisitive commercial interests or not, I wouldn't know.

What I do know is that, on the testimony of the "still" pictures, it is a pretty frank exposition of something that ought to be confined to the clinics and the maternity wards; that it will prove an item of intense interest to certain specialized groups and that it is not "entertainment" in the sense of "box-office" appeal to mass audiences that may include theater patrons of any age from 6 to 106.

Mother is the one to tell you these things, not the screen. Or maybe I'm wrong. Being a bachelor, you know . . .

* * * *

Yesterday's welcome visitor to the drama desk was Carlton Miles, the recurrent avant courier of that provocative drama of the Deep South—and it is very deep, indeed—"Tobacco Road." This play of the penury, plaintiveness and depravity of certain sections that are by no means to be stigmatized in their entirety by this localized treatment of certain of their more deplorable aspects, is to be played here, it seems, for the final time.

The original New York production, I believe, now is in its fifth year—creeping up gradually on the long-run records of "Abie's Irish Rose," "Lightnin'" and the other famous perennials.

There already have been two Jeeter Lesters seen on Washington stages—Henry Hull, who created the part, and Taylor Holmes—most surprising of assignments—who now is playing Secretary Morgenthau in Sam Harris' genial political satire, "I'd Rather Be Right," starring George M. Cohan. A third Jeeter will assume the role for the final Washington engagement. He is John Barton, uncle of Jim Barton, who still is playing the amusing and emaciated "share cropper" in New York.

The present Mr. Barton has been on the stage for 40 years or so. Twenty-five of them were spent in England. They say he does as well as his nephew, Jim, Mr. Hull, James Bell, Charles "Slim" Timblin, or any of the others—if any—who have played the role.

That ought to be good enough.

It is Mr. J. Franklyn Viola, identified with the Gilbert and Sullivan week or two of Savoyard operettas at the Rialto, who takes the trouble to hope that this column will be able to see some one, or all, of "The Mikado," "Pirates of Penzance," "Pinafore," "Trial By Jury," "Iolanthe" and "The Gondoliers" this week.

Nothing would afford us greater pleasure. Having done a magnificent job of wrecking performances of both "The Mikado" and "Trial By Jury" by the superlative incapacity of our rendering of the roles of Katisha—yes, that is what I said, Katisha—and the foreman of the jury, we entertain a peculiar affection for these grand old pieces.

Not quite a contemporary of Frank Moulan's or William Danforth's, we still are "up with them" in lines and business in most of these sterling works.

Now all that remains is the matter of time to get around and see them.

* * * *

Not that I haven't seen them many times before. I remember Frank Moulan at the Studebaker Opera House in Chicago long before I ever knew Samuel Lionel Rothapfel as a corporal in the United States Marine Corps in the West Indies, or Frank ever had had a premonition that he eventually would become a star member of the "Roxy Gang." Mr. Rothapfel—afterward abbreviated to Rothafel—was "Roxy," in case you had forgotten. Mr. Danforth and his charming wife I also saw in many ace items of theatrical entertainment, before both he and Mr. Moulan began making recurrent visits to the National as members of the old Aborn Light Opera Company. It all goes back a few years.

Most everything does!

Two of the best roles in the forthcoming Roadside Theater season will be awarded to newcomers selected at tryouts to be held Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week. The tryouts will be held in the studio of the Rialto Theater. Each applicant will be expected to give a two or three minute reading from a role previously played to establish his, or her, qualifications for important casting.

This resort to public tests is made necessary by the fact that the Roadside this season will be without the services of an actor and actress who previously have contributed much to the success of the "barn theater."

Military Uniforms Dominate Current Pictures in Work

Uniforms suddenly dominate in the new motion pictures. The soldier is the current screen hero.

All of these film were started before the current changes in Europe. Unlike war pictures of the past, these productions are not based on actual battle sequences, but deal with the individual, rather than the mass of soldiers.

The first picture, "Shopworn Angel," at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, finds James Stewart as a young soldier from Texas, who falls in love with a show girl while awaiting his orders to leave New York for France.

At the same studio they are filming "Three Comrades," in which Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young face the problems of the post-war period as Erich Remarque described them from his own experiences in his remarkable novel.

"Yellow Jack" presents an entirely different picture of the Army during the Spanish-American War period. Robert Montgomery, Buddy Ebsen, Alan Curtis and William Henry offer themselves as human guinea pigs in Cuba in a scientific war on yellow fever. This also is being filmed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, where production is nearing completion on "Test Pilot."

Frank Morgan Is Regular Skipper

When Frank Morgan decides to give his first yachting party on board his new boat, "Katinka," he will have a notable passenger list.

Within half an hour after he announced his purchase of the boat, he had requests from Robert Taylor, Fanny Brice, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal, Una Merkel and Jack Conway for a trial ride.

Montgomery Takes Young Fighter as His Ring Protege

His discovery is an 18-year-old amateur, Tommy Garland, whom Montgomery saw fighting in a club ring. The boy's mother, Mrs. Daisy Garland, works at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as waitress in the commissary.

Montgomery selected Richmond "Joe" Lynch, stand-in for Alan Curtis on the "Yellow Jack" set, as manager for the youth. Lynch has had experience handling fighters and shared the new discovery with the star.

According to Montgomery, Garland will be sent to a training camp in the mountains as a conditioning measure before entering the ring as a professional boxer.

Al Jolson has Henry Armstrong, the lightweight champion, and other stars are encouraging some promising fighters.

Gable Substitutes Rod for Rifle and Meets Better Luck

Clark Gable, disgusted with his lack of success on his recent Mexican hunting trip, is joining the devotees of Ike Walton for a deep-sea fishing jaunt.

Having completed his scenes for "Test Pilot," he has two weeks vacation before starting in "Too Hot to Handle."

He plans to spend several days fishing for yellowtail off the coast of Lower California, making his headquarters at San Diego. On the first day out he hooked several beauties. In Mexico he failed to bag a single mountain lion, either with rifle or camera.

What Are the Wild Waves Saying?

PERSONALITIES OF THE WEST AND EAST.

Left—A handsone young man who might be a romantic hero, but, in fact, is the famous screen comedian, Harold Lloyd—without his familiar horn-rimmed "cheaters." Right (above), just one of the sirens from "Cocoanut Grove" offering a reminder that summer can not be far away, as she disports herself between studio scenes. Inset—Violet Heming, a former member of the old Columbia Players, who returns to Washington next week in one of the stellar roles of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," the Broadway comedy hit booked at the National.

JOHN ROOSEVELT, who was reported joining Republican Congressman Bruce Barton's advertising firm, when he is graduated from Harvard, now confides to his friends that he won't take the job . . . ABE LYMAN, who starts his road tour next month, is so worried about conditions in the hinterlands, that he's contemplating billing himself as "Snow White" . . . Elena Karam, who plays Odette in the Federal Theater's "Haiti"—whose last act is enlivened by pounds of smoke-powder, dozens of red flares and scores of pistol-shots, without accident to any member of the cast—had her long, black hair burned on Lenox avenue, when a cigarette dropped on her hat . . . Nationalities Vary On 'Mr. Moto' Set Significant of the international scope of "Mysterious Mr. Moto," Peter Lorre's new thriller now in production, are the widely diversified nationalities of the players.

Lorre, the star with the hypnotic eyes, was born in Rosenberg, an Hungarian village, while sparkling Mary Maguire, youthful Australian beauty, was born in Melbourne, Victoria.

Henry Wilcoxon first saw the light of day in the British West Indies and Frederik Vogeding, one of Hollywood's few authentic Dutchmen, was born in the quaint village of Nymegan, Holland.

Forrester Harvey, whose cockney accent is unparalleled, is a native of Cork County, Ireland. John Rogers was born in Manchester, England.

Director Norman Foster is a Hoosier born in Richmond, Ind., but as an actor he played roles from a Briton to an Indian.

They'll Do It!

Penny Singleton thinks now that the fan who offered to change a tire for her in exchange for her autograph the other day purposely let the air out of the tire to make the deal. Repair men couldn't find a puncture in the tire.

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 18.—Now I've seen everything. It's probably happened before and will again. I've witnessed it with my own eyes.

HEDDA HOPPER.

At Paramount Producer Lucien Hubbard brewed and poured tea for Director James Hogan and members of "The Texans" cast. That's cooperation. A community spirit everyone on a picture should strive to attain. There, working together as one mind, where each has respect for the other. That spirit is bound to be reflected on the screen.

They've had weeks together in Texas with herds of cattle, cavalry, dirt, rain, mud, fire, confusion.

And now for the closer shots, they've transplanted Texas onto a sound stage so they can control the elements—they do, too. And on the stage they brought the cattle, covered wagons, sage brush and dirt. To make the wind—a hurricane machine filled with Fuller's earth—really just the giant propeller of an aeroplane for the wind.

Everybody behind the camera protected their faces with dust masks—the cameraman, Theodor Sparkle, gave me his. But the two weaker members of the cast, May Robson and Joan Bennett, doing close-ups with dialogue, had only thin hankies.

There sat May in the wagon, looking for all the world like our grandmothers when they, too, crossed the plains. She was the Matriarch—didn't have to act it. Tomorrow she'll celebrate her seventy-fourth birthday. I'm hoping she'll have just as many more.

In many weary hours, when I've worked with her on half a dozen pictures, I have never heard a complaint pass her lips. Won't wear glasses—doesn't need them. Has all her teeth, except one wisdom, which got so tough that even May couldn't handle it. And rather than argue with it she had it yanked.

While wading through the mud in a scene she got stuck—took two men to pull her out.

Her philosophy, religion maybe, is trying to be what those who love her think she is. She has but one weakness—her grandchildren.

I met James Hogan, director, a couple of years ago, when I was coaching that bird—I mean songbird—Jan Kiapura. Jan's arrogance and affectation never seemed to jell with that down-to-earth Irishman, Hogan. So Jimmy was put on a Western. And has been climbing steadily ever since. Less than a year ago he did "Ebb Tide," first sea picture made in technicolor. I loved it because they dared be different, Mr. Hubbard also produced that.

Marla Shelton and Jack Dawn had taken their troubles to the divorce court before they'd ever heard of the Oxford Group.

A few nights ago they gave a party for Hollywood's disagreeing and most unhappy couples, hoping their example will bring a lot more jarring people together.

Marla told me she was just a spoiled brat and nothing was quite as important to her as her career. Now she's convinced that being a wife can bring her more happiness. And with the help she's already had may be able to combine the two. Many have.

BERNHEIMER'S THEATERS — DIRECTION SIDNEY LUST

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Couple's Temperamental Instability Affects Wife's Health, Child's Character; Sister Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Am I my sister's keeper? She has always been a highstrung and beautiful girl. After having many suitors she married a man 10 years older than herself, world traveled and clever, but with an equally difficult temper. Their courtship was short. Their first child was stillborn and the next child, a son now 6 years old, was born during the second year of their marriage. This child had a history of colds, croup, etc., during his first three years, which culminated in a tonsil-and-adenoid operation this past winter.

* * * *

Due to the morbid adulation of both parents, which takes the form of over-dressing him in warm clothes, fretting over his diet, and quarreling among themselves, he has not been to school all year. His mother is now at the breaking point. As for me, I am endangering the serenity of my own marriage by worrying over them.

* * * *

I have consulted doctors, talked to the husband and appealed to my sister to take a long rest before it is too late. All her husband can see are the visible signs of her illness, not realizing the deeper cause. He is the type of man who knows none of the subtleties of holding a wife's adoration, no remembrances on anniversaries, no gifts of any kind. He is the check-and-double-check kind of husband.

* * * *

My own husband refuses to recognize them and their tantrums. I am very busy professionally, therefore it is impossible for me to take the positive step of bringing the little boy to our home. Is there anything more I should do? The child is precocious but should be removed from his present environment as he is manifesting temper outbursts. They live in an apartment in winter and go North in summer from the necessity of business. Because of all this their social life has dwindled to nothing. Perhaps you, in your great understanding, can give me a solution. CONCERNED.

* * * *

Consider Child First.

DEAR CONCERNED: As I see it, there is little, if anything, that you can do for your sister and her husband. Their respective difficulties, resulting in mutual disharmony, are self-engendered and must, therefore, be self-corrected, possibly through the medium of psychiatric analysis and subsequent self-knowledge, self-development and self-discipline. Your husband is taking the sanest attitude toward them in "refusing to recognize . . . their tantrums."

* * * *

It is problematic how much you can do for the child. You might be able to do a great deal, supposing you were willing to do it at personal sacrifice and providing his parents would permit you to assume full responsibility for his guidance and care. However, it is unlikely that they will. Their obsessive devotion to him is a frantic gesture at ego satisfaction and reassurance. Each wishes to outdo the other in manifestation of devotion to him, hoping thereby to secure the lion's share of his dependence and devotion in return.

* * * *

On the other hand, since both are little more than children themselves, so far as their psychological level of development is concerned, if they could once be persuaded to turn him over to responsible-minded foster-parents, they might quickly forget him in other preoccupations of an altogether selfish kind. Or they might be persuaded to turn him over to your care until they had rehabilitated themselves as psychologically mature human beings, at which time they would return to the task of parenthood with greater understanding and self-control.

* * * *

Your sister's beauty has probably been her undoing, so far as her failure to develop more substantial and enduring claims to personal merit and social distinction is concerned. The same is probably true of her husband's cleverness, and the background or material advantages which enabled him to become a world traveler. Neither has progressed beyond the vain, selfish, spoiled-child stage of personal development. Each strives to make his point through charm on the one hand, and towering rage on the other hand—universal attributes of the pampered child who is conscious of his superficial social attractiveness.

* * * *

Yet each is subconsciously sick over his failure. Their attitude toward each other and toward their child shows, in each, a pronounced—though unsuspected—inferiority complex, an anxiety neurosis probably rooted in emotional maladjustment, both as individuals and as marriage partners, and a conflict for dominance such as one might expect between two vain, undisciplined egoists. The greatest tragedy in this case, however, is not your sister's pitiable nervous condition—which is deplorable, though potentially remediable—but the harm which is being done to the defenselessly malleable personality and character of a 6-year-old child.

* * * *

Since you are acutely—and understandably—concerned with the situation, I suggest you concentrate primarily on safeguarding the child's welfare. If there is a possibility that you and your husband might be permitted to take him into your home as a foster-child, then I advise you to face honestly this question: Which, in the final assessment of imperishable values, is of greatest value to society—the contribution you might make as a professional or "career" woman, or the contribution you might make by helping the child build a sound body, fine mind and strong, true character?

* * * *

If, for any reason, you are prevented from assuming full responsibility for the child's care, then try to induce his parents to enroll him in the best available private school for children; a school where his unfortunate home background will be taken into careful account in mapping out his training and education. Such a school, in my opinion, is the National Child Research Center, at 3209 Highland place northwest, telephone Emerson 5948. You might investigate its possibilities for your nephew. M. H.

Three-Occasion Costume, a Budget Aid

Afternoon. Dinner. Evening.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE THREE-WAY costume pictured above, designed by Jean Desses, is an excellent tip to the business girl who must adhere to a strict budget and still have the reputation of always looking smart. If you shop wisely and plan your wardrobe around a definite color scheme, the trick is easily solved. Clothes which are versatile enough to adapt themselves to various costumes and thus serve for diverse occasions are a much better buy than those that are divorced entirely from the styling and color theme of the rest of the wardrobe. For instance, in the trio illustrated above—which is really only one costume—this is the way it is worked out. For afternoon, the evening halter and bolero are worn with a black silk crepe skirt, matching the bolero. For dinner, a floor-length skirt matching the halter is added; without the bolero you have a formal evening gown. The same idea could be applied to the entire wardrobe, making a basic costume serve for all occasions by the mere adding or subtracting of clothes items. In this manner, a three-occasion (or more) costume can be bought of good materials and smart styling, and you will have the satisfaction of always being appropriately groomed. It is a much better idea for those on a budget, than a more extensive wardrobe composed of cheap clothes. This applies to both wearing qualities and chic.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 18.

YOU'VE HEARD HER sweet, girlish voice, but you've never seen her. And that's a pity, for she's very pretty indeed. She's 5 feet 2 inches tall, and she barely jiggles the beam at 100 pounds net. Her name is Adriana Caselotti, and her voice is already famous from coast to coast, north and south. For her voice is that of Walt Disney's "Snow White."

In fact, Snow White looks very much like little Adriana, which isn't strange, since the character was drawn from her photograph. She, together with the Disney host of artists and technicians, worked on that history-making picture for over two years. She got a little tired of it, at times, and even thought it was "kind of crazy," for they worked the same phrase over and over until the sound track was absolutely perfect.

The way Adriana got the job was interesting, too. Disney wanted a "high, baby-like voice," and it was prescisely that quality which had kept the girl and her young coloratura soprano out of the movies. Producers, testing her, had invariably said: "Your voice is too child-like. Come back when you're a woman." Wasn't it odd that the very quality which had kept her out of the studios was the one which ultimately won her the fine Disney assignment?

A little Italian from Bridgeport, Conn., and now 21 years old, she feels that at last the movies will open their doors to her on the strength of "Snow White." Meanwhile, she giggles her musical giggle and goes to see the picture again and again. "I get a big kick out of hearing my voice come out of Snow White's mouth," she told me. "I'm not conceited, but I like to hear it, because I know it's mine!" And why shouldn't she?

Her father, Guido, coaches voice at the Metropolitan, and while she is here she giggles happily, and hopes for big things in Hollywood, and sings "With a Smile and a Song" for anyone who asks.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Sherlock Holmes' Test.

My friend, the diagnostician in the large clinic, told me another story which illustrates how valuable it is to use common sense instead of too many scientific instruments in trying to find out what is the matter with people. I told one of the stories yesterday. Here is another one.

People come to the clinic from all over the country. They have usually been examined by half a dozen good doctors beforehand. This patient was a retail merchant of about 50 years of age who, according to the stories of his friends and family, had gradually begun to lose interest in things. He became abstracted and his friends found him unresponsive; sometimes he did not recognize them on the street. He lost weight and walked with a peculiar gait. He had to turn over the conduct of his business to other members of his family and finally the diagnosis of melancholia was made.

He went through a great many tests in the clinice and nobody seemed able to arrive at any different diagnosis from his home physicians. Finally he was brought to the diagnostician's office, who decided he would dispense with the scientific tests and see if he could not figure out what was the matter with the man by observation.

The physical examination revealed nothing but an apathetic man, unnaturally thin and weak for his age. Finally, in looking him over, the diagnostician noticed that he was wearing galoshes. He said to him, "What in the world are you doing with galoshes on in May?"

The man replied, "I am cold all the time. I can't seem to get enough clothes on me."

The diagnosis was myxoedema—in other words, an atrophy of the thyroid gland with a lowered thyroid secretion. (In this particular case the test for thyroid function by the measurement of oxygen use had not been conclusive.

This diagnosis is as often missed as any other in medicine because the symptoms are so indefinite. Often they point simply to a general nervous or mental state and the thyroid is forgotten by the diagnostician.

Improve Your Manners

HE MET HER, liked her, dated her for dinner—and then avoided her forever after!

That's the story of Dave and Madge—and it's the story of many a might-have-been romance.

Nothing puts a girl so definitely on the wrong side of the tracks as poor table manners. And Madge's are terrible!

That determined fist, holding the fork upright. That knife, working away like a lumberjack's saw. Last straw—she talks to Dave with her mouth full.

You'd think Madge would notice that Frances, at the next table, holds her fork lightly, level with the table. She takes small mouthfuls so that dining doesn't interfere with conversation.

But Madge doesn't notice—nor realize that Frances' smooth manners have a lot to do with her popularity with nice people. Madge continues to butter a whole slice of bread instead of a piece at a time. She pushes plates away from her when she's through with them.

Yet it's simple to have manners above criticism. Our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day," tells you all you need to know for dances, dining, motoring, visiting. Learn these pointers ahead of time, avoid the breaks which can put you on the doubtful list.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Etiquette for Every Day, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Beauties.

"YOU KNOW I didn't have to have a thing done to this dress. The clerk said she had never seen a more perfect 16 than I was."

"I never can get fitted in store dresses. I'm too small in the waist."

"They're all too tight across the bust for me. All the fitters say I have an unusually high bust."

"My chief trouble is shoes . . . I have such a high instep. All our family have high insteps."

"I have an awful time getting shoes. All the salesmen tell me—of course they're just kidding—that I have such an aristocratic foot that I might as well make up my mind to buy expensive shoes all my life."

"I never can get stockings that won't wrinkle . . . my ankles are so slender."

"Everything nowadays is made for fat people . . . even the hair styles. Say, how do you like my permanent?"

"It looks grand. You know I——"

"Well, the operator said she had never seen hair take such a nice permanent. She said my hair was unusually healthy."

"I got to get my hair thinned. Honestly its terribly expensive to have such thick hair. The barber says he never saw such hair in all his life . . . well, I just wish you could see the floor after he gets through."

"I've got to get a facial. The woman at the beauty shop gave me a good talking to. She says I really have a marvelous skin and that I ought to take care of it."

"They tested my skin. The woman said she had NEVER seen such a wonderful texture . . . of course she might have been kidding me . . . but anyway, she prescribed a special cream for me."

"I've got a very sensitive skin. It's the same with my nail cuticle . . . and my teeth.

"Say, I had my teeth cleaned last week and the dentist just raved about them. He said he never saw such a perfect mouth . . . outside of a few little fillings he'd have to put in."

"My dentist says he never saw such strong white enamel as I've got in my teeth. He says as soon as he puts in a little bridgework my teeth will be perfect."

"Well, I'll be all fixed up now just as soon as I get through with the doctor. He says I've got almost a perfect constitution but he wants to build me up a little more."

"That's the way with me. I've got perfect organs, the doctor says. He swears I won't look a day over 16 . . . once he gets through with me."

Busy Women.

"No, Ma'am, Mrs. Blink can't come to the phone. She's at her exercises."

"Could I take the message please? . . . No, Mrs. Tapp's in the bath . . . No, you'd better not call back for an hour."

"No, Mis' Fagg ain't here. She's at a concert in the auditorium."

"Who's calling please? . . . No, Mrs. Swank's busy with her benefit committee."

"Will you please leave your number? Mrs. Oxley's relaxing just now."

"No, Mrs. Sniffin can't talk right now. She's at her water colors."

"Mis' Puffer? . . . No, she went over to the beauty saloon."

"No Madam, Mrs. Burlap is with her narcissus."

"Mis' Chipper? No, she went downtown to lunch . . . with some gen'lman."

Long Walk, Good Spring Tonic For Weary Business Woman

Hour's Stroll Best Relief From Many Hours of Brain Work.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SPRING IS THE time to lose that end of the season sag, and walking is a wonderful tonic, for it does more than expose you to the fresh air—it enables you to use more oxygen. The popular idea seems to be that all you have to do is fling open a window and let the fresh air in, but your oxygen consumption is increased only when your muscles are working and require more oxygen.

A long walk, which allows time for the blood to get into the muscles and stimulates the circulation, is far more beneficial than several short walks. An hour or so of walking offers the best possible relief from the nerve tension connected with brain work. In sedentary occupations, the blood is kept in the brain centers for hours at a time and mild exercise continued over a period of time drains the brain centers, releases tension and sends the blood into the muscles and skin.

To turn this activity into a figure program you must watch your step, but you should do that anyway, for your mode of walking makes it a good exercise or a bad one. Don't bend your knees, or let your chin lead you, or slump and sag in the middle of your figure. When your figure is out of alignment it not only detracts from your appearance but it causes you to tire easily. You are exercising your muscles in the wrong position.

There is only one rule you need keep in mind about posture: Walk, stand or sit as tall as you possibly can. Stretch yourself out to your full length and don't leave any slack for posture mistakes or figure bulges. Push up with the top of your head, stretch your neck and raise your chest, and pull up with all those lazy midriff muscles. There should, however, be no tension anywhere. Let the legs and arms swing freely.

Now . . . if you are bent on reducing as you walk, you will have to set yourself a fairly brisk pace. Walking at the rate of three and three-fourths miles per hour takes 1.95 calories per pound of body weight. If you really want to get somewhere with your reducing you will gradually step up your walking rate until you are able to do around five miles an hour. That burns 4.22 calories per pound of body weight and is splendid reducing exercise, too strenuous for those of you who are very much overweight and are not used to exerting yourselves. You will find that the faster you walk the more careful you must be about your posture. There is a tendency, as the speed is increased, to let the head poke forward.

To walk with spring in your step is a fine tonic.

Business, Romance Should Stay Apart, Mrs. Meigs Warns

Romance and business should be two things apart in the working girl's life, in the opinion of Mrs. Katharine Bleecker Meigs, president of the New York League of Business and Professional Women.

In a recent address to student secretaries at Scudder School, New York, Mrs. Meigs advised that social life after working hours be conducted only with those as far removed from the office as possible and only when and if the girl "could take it."

"Naturally, to live a well-rounded life, you must be able to forget business when you leave your desk at night," she said. "Play, dance, be gay, by all means. But don't be a 'droopy-foot.'"

A "droopy-foot," she explained, was a girl who was "such a naughty little stay-out that at business she dragged and lagged over her work the next day.

"A droopy-foot is also inclined to be emotional, and you never can keep a boss or a friend if you are a cry baby. Tears on your boss' shoulder are like Russian dressing on his boiled shirt front."

Mrs. Roosevelt Calls Kennedy Rule 'Sensible'

First Lady Can't Understand Why People Want to Be Presented at Court of St. James's Without 'Real Reason.'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

"Very sensible." That is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's estimation of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's recent rule to limit American curtsies at the Court of St. James's.

Yesterday at her weekly press conference she voiced this opinion, thereby becoming another of the host of notables applauding the plan to present only Americans living in England or related to American officials living there.

HOPE R. MILLER.

"I have never been able to understand why anyone wanted to be presented at court unless there was a real reason," she said. Continuing, she pointed out she could see why anyone might want to talk to England's King and Queen, and might want to see the pageant, "but not be just a part of a long line passing by for a bow. A pageant is always interesting," she added, "but a little hard on the people who provide it."

Wearing a snappy whipcord riding habit and a white scarf around her head, the First Lady sandwiched her conference between tours around the White House lawn, where thousands of children and almost as many adults were enjoying that ancient and honorable institution, the Easter egg-rolling. Lively strains of a band and the general hubbub outside punctuated the conference at which were discussed subjects ranging from the widely discussed "birth of a baby" pictures in a recent issue of Life Magazine, to the possibility of a dictator in the White House.

Despite the fact that in several sections copies of the magazine were ordered seized on the grounds that the pictures were "obscene," the First Lady approves of them. "I never think honest things are bad," she averred. "I think suggestive things which do not deal honestly with a subject are harmful, but the intent of those pictures was to supply people with information. In presenting them, the intent was purely educational, so far as I can see."

She said further she hopes soon to see the movie from which the photographs were taken. Whether the pictures should be shown to children depends upon the individual child, in her opinion. In this connection she related that the small son of one of her friends appeared bored when shown the photograph and observed, "The ostrich in school had a much harder time laying an egg."

Doubts There Will Ever Be a Dictator in White House

When a newspaper woman asked Mrs. Roosevelt how she would like it if the President became a dictator and sent her back to the kitchen, she was highly amused. She said she couldn't imagine the President as a dictator nor herself being sent back to the kitchen. In a more serious vein she observed that dictatorships depend not so much on the individual who heads the country as on the country itself. She expressed doubt that the American people would ever tolerate a dictatorship.

Following the conference, Mrs. Roosevelt and the flock of press women adjourned to the south porch. From there, the First Lady and her grandson, William Donner Roosevelt, escorted by eight policemen, threaded their way through the crowd of egg-rollers and made a tour of the south lawn. Later, she entertained at luncheon members of the Fortnightly Club of New York, an organization founded some years ago by her aunts, Mrs. William Sheffield Cowles and Mrs. Douglas Robinson. Guests included Mrs. Yorke Allen, Mrs. F. Meredith Blagden, Mrs. William Averell Brown, Mrs. Robert A. Chambers, Mrs. Harris R. Childs, Mrs. John A. Dix, Mrs. Lewis A. Eldridge, Princess Simon C. Sidamon-Eristoff, Mrs. Philip M. Garrison, Mrs. Frederick R. Kellogg, Mrs. Adrian V. A. Lambert, Mrs. Frederick W. Lord, Mrs. Philip J. McCook, Mrs. F. Livingston Pell, jr., Miss Alice J. G. Perkins, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Miss Elsie Seeger and Miss Dorothea Villard.

Children's Party Also on Yesterday's Calendar

Miss Sara Delano Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, and William Donner Roosevelt, son of Elliott Roosevelt and Mrs. Curtin Winsor, of Philadelphia, "did the honors" at the children's party at the White House yesterday afternoon. During the latter half of the event, Mrs. Roosevelt made a brief appearance in the dining room to greet the 32 guests. Entertainment was furnished by Harry Baker, magician, and Nancy Forbush, who presented several marionette acts.

This morning Mrs. Roosevelt will receive a band of 22 Girl Scouts at the White House, and at noon she will be guest of honor at the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club. This afternoon she will attend the opening of a boys club and tonight she and the President will entertain at the last large dinner of the season. Following this, there will be a musicale to which additional guests have been invited.

Tomorrow afternoon she will motor down to Williamsburg, Va., where she will spend the night, going on Thursday to Hampton, Va., where she will deliver an address in the afternoon. Also, on Thursday afternoon, Mrs. James M. Helm, social secretary at the White House, will receive a group of women legislators at tea. The First Lady will spend Friday in New York, where she will attend a party at the Todhunter School and also the New York Newspaper Women's "Front Page Ball," at which she will be a guest of honor. On Saturday, at 10 o'clock, she will be at the Girls Scout House, where she will receive C. A. R. children, and at noon, she will attend the celebrity breakfast of the National League of American Pen Women. On Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, she will receive a group of young people from New Jersey, thus winding up her calendar of engagements for the next six days.

Christine Long Is Wed to Arnold A. Willcox In Quiet Ceremony at Montpelier Manor, Md.

David Berns, New York.

Only Immediate Families Are Present for Nuptials at Long Home.

Before an altar banked with Easter lilies in the library of her parents' home, Montpelier Manor, in Laurel, Miss Christine Blair Long, daughter of the former Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, yesterday became the bride of Arnold Augur Willcox. Mr. Willcox is the son of Mrs. Charles Willcox, of Washington, and the late Col. Willcox.

The wedding was performed in the presence only of immediate members of the two families. Officiating was the Rev. Bland Tucker, rector of Georgetown St. John's Church.

Wear Mother's Wedding Gown

Given in marriage by her father, the bride, who in 1934 was presented to the King and Queen of England at Buckingham Palace, chose to wear her mother's wedding gown. Of white satin, it was trimmed with rosepoint lace, arranged in a fragile Queen Elizabeth collar and extending down the front in two parallel panels. Her veil, draped from a flowered coronet, was also of rosepoint lace, and she carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., the maid of honor, was attired in pale yellow marquisette, styled with a full skirt and dainty puffed sleeves. Her flowers were delphinium and yellow roses. Miss Caroline Willcox, maid of honor and sister of the bridegroom, were the same costume as Mrs. Sullivan and carried the same flowers.

Mark Sullivan, jr., served Mr. Willcox as best man, while the ushers were Malvern Morse and Duvall Lemon.

Dr. Kurt Hetzel furnished music for the ceremony and for the reception which followed.

Many Notables Attend Reception

Receiving with the wedding party was Mrs. Long, mother of the bride, who wore a gown of pastel blue chiffon and lace and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Willcox, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in soft gray crepe, with which she wore a claret-toned hat and matching belt.

The historic house, filled with Easter lilies, was a perfect setting for the gathering. Glimpsed among guests were the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. van Haersma de With, Justice and Mr. Stanley Reed, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd.

Also Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the Pan American Union, and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, who recently returned from the West Coast.

Other guests at the reception were Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mrs. Daniel S. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton; Ralph Snowden Hill, Blair Lee, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Senator George L. Radcliffe, Senator Theodore F. Green, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey.

Those invited to the reception were ushered into a salon where a collection of wedding gifts were on display. They included antique silver, rare porcelain and among many other things a collection of letters which had originally belonged to the bride's ancestor, John Breckinridge, Attorney General under Jefferson.

Made Debut At Tea in 1934

The same year in which the former Miss Long was presented at Buckingham Palace, she made her debut in this country at a tea at Grasslands December 2. This was followed by a debutante ball in January, also at Grasslands. She attended the Ethel Walker School at Simsbury, Conn.

Mr. Willcox prepared at Friends School here to enter Yale University, where he was graduated from the School of Engineering in 1932. He is now in business here.

The bride, on her father's side, is descended from William S. Long, who went from North Carolina to St. Louis, following the Civil War. He in turn was a grandson of Samuel Miller Breckinridge, prominent attorney and founder of the Terminal Railroad.

Her father studied at Princeton under Woodrow Wilson, and when Wilson became President, entered the foreign service.

Moira Archbold Is Betrothed To Nicol Smith

Daughter of Social Leader Here Has Set No Date for Wedding.

Mrs. Anne Archbold announces the engagement of her younger daughter, Miss Moira Archbold, to Nicol Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hays Smith, of Burlingame, Calif.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Archbold is a granddaughter of the late John D. Archbold, one of the founders of the Standard Oil Co., and is the sister of Mrs. Elliott Strauss, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Archbold 2d and Armar Archbold.

Her fiance is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Nicol, of Stockton, Calif. His father is a lawyer, director in numerous companies and owner of extensive oil lands.

Mrs. Archbold, mother of the bride-to-be, is a social and civic leader here. Her picturesque early years were inspiration for the book "Her Children's Children," by Arthur Train. Married to an Englishman, she lived for sometime in Africa. Later, wishing to divorce him and keep her four children, she took them away from England in a tanker sent by her father. Returning to this country, she resumed her maiden name.

After their wedding trip the couple will divide their time between Washington and New York.

Mme. Ing, who was educated in Normal College at San Jose, Calif., says no specific arrangements have as yet been made for the nuptials and that her daughter has still to select the place where they will be performed.

Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Dolph have returned to their home at Lorton, Va., after spending the winter in Florida.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

BASEBALL is evidently still the people's game, and mostly a man's game at that. Yesterday at the opening of the 1938 American League championship race the women were outnumbered by about ten to one and there were far more political celebrities than social.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, watched the game from a box, as did the Postmaster General, James A. Farley. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen kept looking warily at the threatening skies, despite the fact that he was comparatively safe in a raincoat.

Even the Presidential party was a stag affair. Present were Mr. Roosevelt's aides, Col. Edwin Watson and Capt. W. B. Woodson; Physician Ross McIntyre; Secretaries Stephen Early and Marvis McIntyre; Son James Roosevelt, Harry Hopkins and Rudolph Foster.

Vice President Garner, wearing a pearl gray sombrero, was as usual wisecracking with the photographers who snapped him. Senator Carter Glass and Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore were other politicos present. The only women in a neighboring sea of men were Mrs. W. W. Howes, wife of the Assistant Postmaster General, and her daughter, Mrs. John Stewart. They were dressed for bad weather in heavy suits of navy blue.

THE Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi will entertain at dinner on Wednesday evening, April 27. They are spending this week in New York, where they will attend the opening of a Hungarian library. They recently returned from Cuba. Although the minister has been accredited to that country for a number of years, this was Mme. Pelenyi's first visit . . . Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal will leave a week from tomorrow for Havana, where the former has just been assigned to duty by the State Department. This will be his first post, as he was among those who passed the exams last September. The Bonsals reside in a most attractive old apartment in Georgetown, the same building which also houses Mrs. Mondell Gregg. Mr. Bonsal's father is Stephen Bonsal, widely known newspaperman.

A SENTIMENTAL journey will shortly be made by the United States Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Josephus Daniels. They are coming all the way from Mexico City to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home, Wakestone, in Raleigh, N. C.

Impressive invitations, engraved in gold, have already been received by a number of Washingtonians. The party will take place Monday evening, May 2, from 8:30 until 10:30. Daniels 2d.

• • • •

AMBASSADOR and Mrs. Daniels have numerous friends in Washington, where he served as Secretary of the Navy under President Wilson. Mr. Daniels has had an interesting career, which began auspiciously when he became editor of a North Carolina paper at the age of 18. He then came to Washington, where he was chief clerk of the Department of the Interior, going back to North Carolina later to edit the News and Observer. He has been Ambassador to Mexico since 1933.

Despite his many public activities, Mr. Daniels has found time to write a number of books, among them a life of Woodrow Wilson, and a volume entitled "The Navy and the Nation."

Mrs. Daniels was before her marriage half a century ago Miss Addie Worth Bagley.

In the presence of members of the family, Miss Barbara Boss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Boss, was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Alexander M. Heron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Heron, of Washington. The ceremony was to have taken place at the Cathedral but, because of the recent death of the bride's grandmother, it was held at the home of her parents on Forty-fifth street.

The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown made with a long train and a brief tulle veil held in place by orange blossoms. She carried white roses and gardenias.

Her sister, Mrs. Arthur Taylor, served as matron of honor and only attendant, wearing a frock of coral chiffon and carrying African daisies.

Julian B. Heron served as his brother's best man and the ushers were Arthur Taylor, Grant Boss, brother of the bride, John R. Reed, Donelson C. Glassie and Preston C. King, jr.

The house was decorated with snapdragons, roses and delphinium and an improvised altar had been erected in the drawing room.

The bride attended Holton-Arms and her husband Georgetown University.

Japan Fighting Europe, Not China, U. S. Professor Tells A.A.U.W.

It is high time the United States looked at political and economic events in Asia in a realistic way, members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women were told yesterday by Dr. Fritz Earmarth, who addressed their Monday session. Dr. Earmarth, who is assistant professor of political science at the University of Oklahoma, has just returned from a world tour.

"The real conflict in the Far East is not Japan against China, but imperialistic Japan against Europe which has imperialistic interests in the Orient," he declared. "The national awakening in the Orient is linked with lack of unity among the European powers."

Dr. Earmarth told of a conference in India with Sir Rabindranath Tagore. While the philosopher expressed himself as deeply grieved over the inhumanity of Japanese in their invasion of China, he also told Dr. Earmarth he was grateful to see for the second time an Asiatic nation showing Europe it was a first rate power.

The speaker was introduced by Miss Mary Louise Brown, chairman of international relations for the A. A. U. W. of Washington. Following his address tea was served under the chairmanship of Dr. Mary Dabney Davis.

Three in House Fight Airport at Camp Springs

Vinson, Lanham and Wood Block Measure Urged by Roosevelt.

Despite the backing of President Roosevelt, the Camp Springs airport bill yesterday ran into obstacles that threatened to block it for the session.

Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, planned to call the bill up under unanimous consent. Yesterday, however, he was informed that Chairman Vinson, of the Naval Affairs Committee; Chairman Lanham, of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, and Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, were prepared to object.

Compromise Sought.

Vinson said he still agreed with the Navy Department, which maintained from the first that the site is too close to its new naval radio station at Cheltenham.

Lanham believes that action should be delayed until after his committee reports on the airport inquiry it has conducted this session. Wood is author of the Suitland airport bill, which he is urging as a substitute for the Camp Springs measure.

In an effort to break the impasse and obtain approval of a compromise Camp Springs bill, May proposed that the three interested House committees name sub-committees which might come to an agreement.

Lanham called a meeting of his committee today, and it is probable that it will name a sub-committee. There is also a possibility that he may file a report on his committee's findings.

Dozen Sites Studied.

While hearings have been confined to the Gravelly Point and the Suitland airport bills, Lanham said that his committee is not bound to recommend either of the sites. He pointed out that the committee has investigated a dozen or more suggested sites and feels free to select any one regardless of whether any legislation has been introduced.

The Camp Springs bill has run into difficulties almost from its inception in the Washington Airport Commission. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the commission, rushed the measure through the Senate last August.

Under a "gentlemen's agreement" it was to be passed by the House before adjournment of the same session. A parliamentary tangle on the last day, however, prevented May from calling it up at a time when it might have been approved.

Since then the Navy Department has pushed its opposition.

Contract Bridge

Five-Suit Bridge.

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Yesterday, I explained the mechanics of five-suit bridge. Just as a check-up, let us run over them briefly. The addition of a new suit (royals) to a standard 52 card deck gives us 65 cards. When dealt, 16 to each player, we have one card over which goes face upward in the middle of the table. It is called the "kitty," and it becomes the property of the highest bidder—in other words, the eventual declarer is privileged to wait for the opening lead, then to pick up the kitty and insert it in his own hand or in dummy, discarding any card he chooses from the same hand. Game at five-suit bridge is 120 points, instead of 100. The rank and trick values of suits at five-suit bridge are as follows: Notrump (the highest ranking) 40 points; next, royals, 30 points per trick; next, spades 25, hearts 25, diamonds 20 and clubs 20. The book at five-suit bridge is eight tricks; thus, a bid of "one" is a bid for nine tricks. There are three grades of slams: a six bid is a small slam contract for 14 tricks, a grand slam requires 15 tricks, and a bid for all the tricks is a super-slam. The bonuses are: Small slam, not vulnerable 500; vulnerable 750; grand slam, not vulnerable 1,000; vulnerable 1,500; super-slam, not vulnerable 1,500; vulnerable 2,000. Penalties remain the same as in contract. Honor bonuses remain the same except that now a player may hold all five aces in one hand and for this he gets 300 points.

Now let us follow the bidding and play of an actual hand:

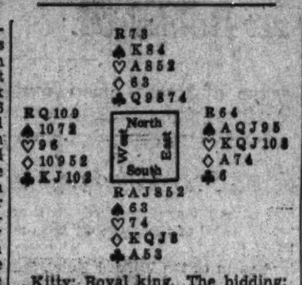
Neither side vulnerable.

The kitty, the royal king, was of course very attractive to South, who already held a very respectable royal suit. He mentally added the royal king to his own holding and based his bidding on its possession. Whether he would discard a spade, a heart or a club depended, of course, on the sort of dummy he would find and on the opening lead that was made.

It should be noted that the player who first mentions the suit to which the kitty belongs (in this case, royals) is considered to be basing his bids partly on the acquisition of that card. Thus, North knew that South was figuring the royal king into his (South's) bidding and North, therefore, did not figure the same card into his own holding.

North had what amounts to a poor hand in five-suit bridge. With 2-plus additional honor-tricks in the deck, a hand containing only two tricks is far from good. North, therefore, responded with a negative notrump. East had a good hand and used a conventional takeout double. He, too, figured on picking up the royal king if he were to win the auction, but whether he would put that kitty card into dummy or into his own hand remained to be seen. South decided to try for a game in royals, although, it should be noted, he was not forced to do so in defense of a game contract; the four spade bid of the opponents was only a part-score bid which, if fulfilled, would return only 100 points, 20 less than game.



Kitty: Royal king. The bidding:

1 R	Pass	1 N-T	Dbl.
2 R	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
3 R	Pass	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
4 R	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

West, with a fairly sure trick in royals and in clubs, and on the basis of his partner's strong bidding, doubled and opened the spade ten. North exposed his hand as dummy, and declarer considered the best method of using the kitty. Obviously there was no point in putting it in dummy because there was no discard the dummy could make to improve its holding. By placing it in his own hand, however, South could get rid of a losing spade or a losing heart. Actually, he decided to discard the spade three, which he put on the side of the table where it could be viewed during the rest of the play by all players.

Since, in the subsequent play, the finesse in royals lost to West, declarer had to concede five tricks in all, as follows: one royal, one spade, one heart, one diamond and one club. Thus, he was down one on his contract for 12 tricks. But, since East-West would have fulfilled their part-score four spade contract, this was really a slight gain.

New Art Process Used At Cardoza High School

A new "silk screen" process of duplicating art work is being used by students of Cardoza High School to prepare 150 posters announcing the presentation of "Peter Pan" by the Children's Studio of Drama on April 30 and May 2.

Under the direction of Dr. John E. Washington, Cordoza youngsters are learning the process while producing the posters. "Peter Pan" is being directed by Rose Robison Cohen for the benefit of the Langdon School for Crippled Children.

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT, if you are cross, lifeless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

Quite a few Democrats, including Congressmen, go to the stately Washington mansion of Henry L. Stimson to discuss foreign affairs—although he is a Republican former Secretary of State.

Rebecca Wellington. . . . potent aide

There's nothing underhanded about this; the State Department occasionally consults him, too. Oddly enough, he agrees with Roosevelt and Hull on many fundamentals; about the only trade pacts he enthuses.

Latest story about Goering, the Nazi field marshal, whose offices, titles and uniforms are manifold, told at a diplomatic tea: While he was entertaining guests a servant tiptoed up in some agitation.

Senator Carter Glass, like Jim Farley, neither smokes nor drinks; but he chews gum drops . . . Behind the scenes, one of the Capital's influential young women is Rebecca Wellington, who is social secretary to five or six legations and embassies.

"—it's tea at cocktail parties"

At fashionable Washington cocktail parties—especially at the embassies and legations—the tea sippers often seem to outnumber the cocktail drinkers . . . There aren't exactly any cobwebs on the elbows of the liveried servants who pour the hard liquor, but an embassy is no place to get squiffied, under the eyes of trained observers.

This is a plea to Senators to remain in their own seats as much as possible during the tourist season . . . With the aid of the charts handed out by doorkeepers, the visiting gallery gods try to figure out which Senator is which . . . This, of course, is unfair to both gentlemen.

Nothing more deadly can be said about a Washingtonian than that he is secretly in the pay of a foreign country . . . It is being said about several who are prominent in the Capital's life—including one of the more outspoken of the local fascistic philosophers, one of the town's social adornments.

To some observers who don't have to run for re-election, the haste of Congress to adjourn appears unseemly . . . The choice is between remaining in Washington long enough to save the country this year and earn their 1938 salaries, or to hurry home and get renominated and re-elected so as to be in a position to earn the $10,000 and save the country next year; not an easy choice. Some selfish people prefer to be saved this year.

Trade Pacts Attacked at Peace Parley

Prof. Higgins Condemns Hull's Policies at Catholic Meeting.

Holy Cross Historian Says Free Trade Idea Is Repudiated.

The twelfth annual conference of the Catholic Association for International Peace last night became a battleground over the question of support for the reciprocal trade policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

Into an atmosphere or general approval for this policy, voiced by half a dozen speakers, the Rev. Patrick Higgins, professor of history at Holy Cross College, hurled an attack on the Hull treaties, the speakers who supported them, and the free trade doctrines of the classical economists.

The latter he said were repudiated alike by Communists and the Holy See. He classed Secretary Hull as a member of the "liberalistic" school, and warned Catholics against supporting the reciprocal treaties. Father Higgins listed as an example of the danger of relaxing tariff barriers, the New England textile industry, where he said, the average weekly wage was $11, warning that they would not survive foreign competition.

In reply to Father Higgins, the Rev. R. A. McGowan, of the National Catholic Welfare conference, pointed out that the New England textile industry has been hurt mostly by competition from the South.

Father McGowan asked whether "we should establish a tariff frontier at the Potomac River?"

He declared he was in favor of the Hull treaties. Father McGowan declared that the modern world was characterized by tremendously increased productivity, world unity, and variety of one region against another. "The job that's facing us is that of using these things for human welfare," he said.

Others Indorse Treaties.

Approval for the Hull treaties was given by several earlier speakers, including the Right Rev. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University; the Rev. Dr. John F. Cronin, of Baltimore; Dr. Joseph L. Apodaca, economist in the Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Eva J. Ross, of the College of St. Elizabeth, Convent Station, N. J.

Dr. C. E. McGuire, Washington economist, suggested that until the sound character of contracts is accepted in public and private affairs, there would be little gain in seeking formulas for adjusting monetary standards to promote international exchange of goods.

More than 150 persons attended the meeting, held at the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

In an earlier meeting, the Rev. William Bolger C. S. C., declared that there are many problems in the modern State such as the child labor amendment, and C. I. O. organizations on which Catholics ought to differ.

Tariffs Condemned.

He pointed out, however, that there was no room for Catholic disagreement on the immorality of contraception, divorce and remarriage, or other questions covered by th doctrine of the church.

During the morning session, devoted to discussion of economic injustice, Father Bolger said the United States had been guilty of "false economic nationalism" in its use of protective tariffs. Describing economic nationalism as "a world disaster," he said the root of the evil was in the fear of war, and he called for "some kind of collective security" to diminish that fear.

On the same probem, Dr. James M. Eagan, of New Rochelle College, New Rochelle, N. Y., said that economic nationalism and imperialism are anti-Christian in all their aspects, and urged a policy based on social justice.

"Only when we realize that treating one's neighbor as a human being possessing a soul, is not simply the proper conduct of a Christian, but also sound economics, will some solution for our economic ills be found," he declared.

Sees Peril in Isolation.

Dr. Francis Weberg, of St. Francis College, Joliet, Ill., attributed world troubles to a general "moral disarmament," of breakdown of morality, and charged that "the selfishness and greed of nations is but a reflection of the selfishness and greed of individuals." He declared that international conflicts should be relieved by lowering tariff walls, relaxing immigration laws, and following a policy of international cooperation.

Dr. Weberg declared the American attempt at isolation was "dangerous because it deceives the people into a false sense of security."

Other speakers included Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, of Bryn Mawr College; Clarence J. McCabe, Washington; the Rev. John La Farge, New York City; Sister Teresa Marie, Nazareth College, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Elizabeth M. Lynskey, Hunter College, New York City; the Rev. Joseph B. Koncius, S. T. D., Mount Carmel, Pa.; and Dr. Percy Robert, of Catholic University. Presiding officers at the meetings were Dr. Walter Willigan, St. John's University, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. John Tracy Ellis, Catholic University, and Elizabeth W. Loughran, Boston, Mass.

Eye Method Is Explained By Dr. Green

St. Louis Expert Discusses Modification of Glaucoma Technique.

150 Ophthalmologists Hear Lecture in G.W. U. Course.

A new re-enforcement of the accepted treatment for glaucoma—an affliction which causes more than a quarter of all blindness in the United States—was explained yesterday by Dr. John Green, professor of ophthalmology at St. Louis University, to 150 of his colleagues assembled here for a postgraduate course sponsored by the George Washington University School of Medicine.

Emphasizing that his medical treatment is not a substitute in cases requiring surgery, Dr. Green recommended administration of adrenalin through an eyedropper, in conjunction with the doses of pilocarpine which have been prescribed by the profession for a number of years. The adrenalin application, which is required less frequently than the pilocarpine, can be given within two hours after the latter.

Pressure on Nerve.

The eye tension characteristic of glaucoma is caused when the drainage canal for the aqueous fluid becomes blocked and the fluid presses upon the optic nerve. Unchecked, glaucoma atrophies the nerve and eventually brings complete blindness.

The combination of the two drugs, Dr. Green said, gives added protection when the glaucoma patient is stricken with another disease elsewhere in the body. Pilocarpine alone is often ineffective in reducing the pressure on the eye, which is symptomatic of glaucoma, when the victim is undergoing an unrelated illness.

For many glaucoma sufferers who cannot be operated upon, Dr. Green stated he also had found adrenalin applications a valuable adjunct to pilocarpine in controlling eye pressure, even when the patient is otherwise in good health.

Experiment Urged.

Adrenalin may aggravate rather than control glaucoma in some cases, Dr. Davis warned, and administration of a weak, experimental solution by a qualified ophthalmologist must always precede full treatment with the drug. Routine examination of the eyes by a competent practitioner is the only method of detecting glaucoma, an insidious ailment, cause unknown, which overtakes the victim without warning symptoms. Any impairment of vision from glaucoma is permanent and the aim of treatment is merely to prevent further loss of sight.

12 Colleges Send Delegates to 4th Flying Conference

Delegates from 12 colleges yesterday opened the Fourth National Intercollegiate Flying Conference at the Carlton Hotel. They selected Akron, Ohio, for their national air meet in June. Reports of committees showed Leland Stanford University of California and Harvard University tied for highest flying time with 1,600 hours each.

Last night the conference held an informal party at headquarters of the National Aeronautic Association. Dan C. Martin, son of the Governor of Washington, is president of the group.

The conference today will hear representatives of the Army and Navy describe the service flying schools and will inspect Bolling Field and Anacostia Naval Air Station. At a banquet tonight at the Shoreham Hotel the Grover Loening Trophy will be presented by Rudolph Loening to the club with the most outstanding flying record.

Mrs. McNeill Dies In North Carolina

Mrs. James W. McNeill, formerly of Washington, died yesterday in North Wilkesboro, N. C. She was the widow of James W. McNeill, Washington attorney.

A native of North Carolina, she came to Washington upon her marriage to Mr. McNeill and returned to North Wilkesboro after his death several years ago. While here she was active in the Woman's Civic Club, the Congressional Club, Twentieth Century Club and the North Carolina State Society.

Funeral services will be at the graveside in Glenwood Cemetery Wednesday at 11 a. m. Mrs. McNeill is survived by a son, Dr. James H. McNeill of North Wilkesboro, and a brother, Robert H. McNeill of Washington.

Frank B. Noyes Given Dominican Decoration

Frank B. Noyes was decorated by the Dominican government yesterday for "eminent services" in "behalf of culture and human welfare as president of the Associated Press during the last 38 years."

The decoration, the Order of Merit Juan Pablo Duarte, in the grade of commander, highest Dominican honor, was conferred by the Dominican president and transmitted to Noyes by Andres Pastoriza, Dominican minister here, and the legation counselor, Emilio Garcia Godoy.

Maxine Flies Here for License, But Must Return to Chicago

MAXINE HOWARD.

Radio Trouble Forces Howard's Wife to End Intended Five-Hour Flight at Pittsburgh, but She Comes On Here by Airline to See Mother.

Armed with a pink temporary pilot's license, Mrs. Maxine Howard, tall blonde wife of Ben O. Howard, Chicago speed flier, manufacturer and test pilot, landed here yesterday to see about getting her permanent license restored.

She needed only five hours solo flying time and a test flight before a Department of Commerce inspector. But she was finding that not so easy as it looked.

She reached here not in the plane she started to fly from Chicago but in a ship of Pennsylvania Central Airlines. Her own plane, which she described as "a commercial version of Mister Mulligan," was left at Pittsburgh.

"I would have earned my five hours time flying down here," she asked, "but I had to land at Pittsburgh when the radio started acting up and come on by airline. Anyway, I got in 2½ hours from Chicago to Pittsburgh and I'll get another 2½ hours going back."

Visiting her mother, Mrs. Cora B. Schoen at 1445 Otis place northwest, was a reason for her trip as important as building up the needed time, Mrs. Howard explained last night.

"I wanted to visit mother," she said, "and flying here was a five-hour trip. It works out just right."

The plane she started to fly down from Chicago was the first she has flown since she and her husband cracked up in New Mexico September 4, 1936, during a Bendix Trophy race incident to the National air races, when "a propeller blade let go." They were flying Mister Mulligan, designed and built by Howard.

Mrs. Howard came out of the crash with both legs broken and her husband had a foot amputated. She limps a little and uses a cane "if I'm in a hurry." Her husband went back last spring to flying for United Airlines as a research engineer.

Mrs. Howard said last night she would take her Commerce Department tests after she returns to Chicago instead of here, because "I hadn't thought of taking it here and, anyway, I'd have to rent a plane to get 2½ more hours. That would be sort of funny, wouldn't it?" She didn't say why.

She said she didn't know Benny Howard when he blew into Chicago during the National Air Races in 1930, flying a little white low-wing monoplane named Pete and took practically all the prizes they were offering. A year or so later they met and were married and then Mrs. Howard took up flying "in matrimonial self-defense."

As a matter of fact, her husband taught her to fly and she has been content to get along with a private pilot's license, which means just what it says. She can fly a plane for fun but not for profit. She doesn't even keep a record of all her time in the air, she said.

"I don't know if I'll go in for any more competitive flying," she replied to a question. "My last venture turned out to be much too expensive."

Mrs. Howard said she will return to Pittsburgh Wednesday or Thursday, if weather permits, and will pilot her own plane from there to Chicago, adding the unflown half of the needed five hours. Then she will be ready to do the landings, takoffs, spins, figure eights and other things the watchful Commerce Department requires before it returns licenses to pilots who have been laid up by injuries.

Voteless D.C. Held National 'Disgrace'

Washington's lack of a voice in its own affairs was called "preposterous" and a "disgrace" to the Nation by William H. Mondell, chairman of the executive committee of the Citizens Conference on Suffrage, in a radio appeal last night to citizens of the District to vote in the suffrage referendum April 30.

"Legally impotent and politically powerless, 650,000 American citizens exist in parliamentary exile and are consulted concerning their own destinies only as a gesture of courtesy, and the courtesy even was lacking when a few days ago citizens of the District were ejected from a Congressional committee," Mondell declared.

'Clean-Lot' Drive Spurred by Notes

Addressed to "Mr. Dirty Lot Owner," the first installment of more than 1,000 letters from the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday was sent to citizens whose property has been indicated by local youth organizations for beautification in the civic "clean-up" campaign.

The letters suggest that property owners unable to clean up unsightly lots personally get labor from the District Unemployment Center.

Crews of workers from various boys' clubs will be available, under board supervision, to tidy lots and plant grass in cases where owners cannot pay for labor, it was announced.

Home Ideals More Important Than Schools, Says Dr. Rauth

The Rev. Dr. J. Edward Rauth, Catholic University psychology professor, told members of the Boys Guidance Association last night that "ideals learned in the home are more important in the development of a child's character than formal classroom training."

Dr. Rauth, delivering the sixth in the series of Carroll lectures at the Willard Hotel, warned that overprotection by parents may blight the life of a child. While, he said, all children must taste success, they must also know failure in order to be able to adjust themselves to adult life.

There is also danger, Dr. Rauth said, in parents' projecting their own ambitions into the life of a child. As an example of the results of such a projection, he cited the case of a woman intent on her son's entering the medical profession.

The boy was unhappy, the psychologist said, and was failing in school. Examination revealed that the lad was mentally incapable of performing even high-school work.

Similarly, Dr. Rauth declared, "too ardent devotion to every fad in child-training often leads to disaster." He pointed out that parents addicted to such faddism are prone to take every bit of advice offered them, even when the counsel is contradictory.

John District Tried; Found Low in 'I.Q.'

Placed on Probation for Inadequate Care of 'His Children.'

Mock Proceedings Hit 'Spouse 'Congress for Penury.

"John District" was found guilty of inadequately caring for his "children," but released on probation rather than consigned to "an institution already overcrowded," at a mock trial conducted by the Monday Evening Club last night at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Called to the witness stand by Prosecuting Attorney Edgar M. Gerlach, vice president of the club, Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau of the Department of Labor, testified that the "I. Q. of 'John District,' the defendant, is not equal to that of the average city of the country."

If the defendant were given more nourishment in the form of appropriation," the witness testified, "his I. Q. might be raised to the level of other cities."

Too Many Children.

Next witness was Patricia Morris, chief of child welfare of the division of District Public Welfare.

"Dou you know the defendent, John District?" asked Gerlach.

"Yes, I work for him," said Miss Morris.

"What do you know about the care or lack of care he has exercised for his children's upkeep?"

"When he continues to have children when he can't afford them, I care for them," Miss Morris testified," and he is supposed to pay me for this service, but this year I cared for 1,920 of his children and received only $278 in return."

Testifying that the District was suffering "from too much minimum wages and maximum hours," Morris Klass, executive director of the Jewish Social Bureau, said, "the defendant, with his earning ability, should be able to control his spouse, Congress, instead of yielding to her at every turn."

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School for the Feble Minded and acting superintendent of the National Training School for Girls, told the jury-audience that "the defendant has been forced to crowd the sub-normal members of his family into buildings which were erected to accomodate less than half the number actually cared for."

On the stand in his own defense, "John District," represented by George A. Warren, estimated his age at "somewhere around 80," and was unable to give an accurate account of the total number of members of his family.

He testified that he spent little on "smoking, drinking and women," and that his "only pleasure was a few parks and public buildings."

Treated "as a Stranger."

In his decision in the case, "Judge" Louis Ottenberg, said "It appears that the defendant has many beautiful parks, roadways and public buildings in his possession, but that when he goes to his mother, Congress, for funds to maintain this property, he gets nothing. He is treated as a stranger in his own home. If Mr. District could have a vote and representation in his parents' affairs, he would ease the burden."

Defense counsel in the mock trial was John F. Victory, with Richard Hall as clerk of the court.

The following were nominated officers of the club: Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the women's bureau of the police department, for president; Gerlach for first vice president; Dr. Emma S. Winslow for second vice president; Carroll E. Rolen for recording secretary; G. S. Decker, for corresponding secretary Otto Cass, for treasurer.

NATS TROUNCE MACKS IN OPENER, 12 TO 8

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, APRIL 19, 1938 X*

This Morning

Mr. Bonura Is Tops in Fans' Eyes.

By Shirley Povich.

No newcomer to the Washington club ever justified his press notices to quite the same extent as did Henry John Bonura yesterday. The large Italian from New Orleans who was supposed to add punch to the Nats' attack did that in the grand manner, at least in the opening game.

POVICH

He didn't dally, either. The first time he was summoned to the plate for the Nats in a league game he was very much on the spot. Two runners were on base, and he was occupying the clean-up hitting position. Zeke was supposed to hit in a crisis like that. At least, that was why Clark Griffith had traded the fancy-fielding Joe Kuhel to Chicago for the big fellow. He wanted somebody who could drive runners across the plate.

And the press dispatches from the Nats' training camp had said, unqualifiedly, that Bonura could hit—consistently—when runners were in scoring position. Washington fans had been led to expect it. And there Zeke was, presented with the chance, on his very first trip to the plate.

He let a low curve go by. He doesn't like slow curves. And then he ignored a high, wide one. And then, on the next pitch, he swung. It was only a single, but it was a man-sized single, waist high, past the tthird baseman like a shot. And it scored a run. And that was what Bonura was supposed to do.

Zeke required only six innings to demonstrate his full value to the Washington club. That home run he swatted in the sixth must surely have been one of the hardest-hit balls ever to arch into the leftfield bleachers for a home run. It literally cut its way through atmosphere heavy with rain and it sailed into the bleachers with plenty of margin—half way to the top of the stands. On a clear day that ball would have struck the sign atop the seats.

The suspicion is that Bonura's presence with the Nats will serve to give Washington a different kind of ball team. Never, in recent years, have the Nats been a team that could slug it out with the opposition if need be. Always they were forced to play tight ball, and hope for good pitching. They boasted high-average hitters, but none who could break up ball games with truly lust clouts.

* * * *

Yesterday they won with poor pitching . . . a new experience for Washington teams. In the past Washington clubs went only as far as their pitchers could take them. Good pitching is still a great help to a ball club, but the Nats, with Bonura, are not now utterly reliant on good pitching.

The Detroit Tigers demonstrated last season how much long-distance hitting meant to a ball club. The Tigers, with the exception only of the St. Louis Browns, had the most dismal pitching in the league in 1937, yet they finished second to the Yankees.

There was much satisfaction for Manager Bucky Harris in that victory over the Athletics yesterday aside from the hitting display of Bonura. Harris is not constrained to regard with any alarm whatsoever the shoddy pitching of Wes Ferrell who went the nine-inning route only because the Nats happened to give him a dozen runs to work on. Ferrell was pitching with a shoulder that pained him on almost every delivery. Harris knew of his ailment but bowed to Ferrell's desire to pitch. He has the assurance of Trainer Mike Martin that the pitcher's soreness in his shoulder muscles is only temporary.

* * * *

Until yesterday, Harris was genuinely worried over the failure of Mel Almada to strike his hitting stride. His only consolation during the futility of Almada's hitting in the South was the thought that when the season began the Mexican might recover his talents. Yesterday Almada wasted little time in demonstrating that he isn't the weakling he appeared to be. He hit a two-bagger on the second pitch of the game that was a lusty poke for a left-handed hitter and on

It was the second homer for the Nats; Lewis having pocketed one in the centerfield corner.

Roosevelt's Pitch Short

Briefest 'Toss Out' Seen at Yesterday's Game.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A pall of gray hung heavily over the green acres at Seventh street and Florida avenue yesterday as President Franklin D. Roosevelt, wearing his best smile, and ably assisted by the Nats and Macks, ushered in a new baseball campaign.

Though skies were overcast, the lush, emerald-green diamond treacherous underfoot and more than 29,000 who viewed the ceremonies bundled snugly in oilskins, enthusiasm was unstinted. The throng yelled with gusto at every opportunity and the sinewy athletes gave it plenty to cheer about.

There was a disconcerting note, however, when Vice President Garner raised his hand in semi-Fascist style to salute the President as he entered his box. It looked suspiciously like he might be threatening to punch him on the nose. Republican agents present popped up like Jacks-in-the-box and sat as stiffly as starched doilies in hopeful anticipation of an open break in rival ranks. But Mr. Garner's motion was deceiving.

"How'ya, Chief," he grinned warmly.

The clouds, hurrying by like gray battle-steeds rushing into the fray, seemed willing to disperse early in the morning, and a queue of bleacheritcs wound eagerly up to the leftfield ticket windows for the best available seats. Over the Georgia avenue grandstand entrance a freshly-painted "Standing Room Only" sign stood solidly and silently with its message.

Not long were the stands in filling, and the rambling, low-bellied stadium was nearly solid with buzzing humanity as early as 1 o'clock. The bleachers filled more quickly, although threatening weather left patches of empty seats. When the President's sleek, long, black car rolled noiselessly through the gates, fans were standing four deep around the lower grandstand seats, and milling aimlessly about in the upper tier.

Not a thunderous burst of applause greeted the Chief Executive, but a polite round of hand-clapping and slim volley of cheers. Some said his reception was not as enthusiastic as in previous years, but others thought it just the opposite. He was well received, this writer thought.

Mr. Roosevelt was welcomed by Clark Griffith, president of the club, and made his way up the ramp to his box with a broad smile. He waved to acquaintances and to groups of fans who continued to applaud.

Mr. Garner, Griffith and the President's military aides led the march to centerfield where Old Glory was hoisted to a brisk southwesterly breeze and the accompanying military strains of the Army Band. Marching with mechanical and

Bosox Nip Yanks, 8-4; Bagby Stars in Debut

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 18.—The ancient baseball theory that the son of one of its stars is never brilliant was upset today, along with the New York Yankees, when Jim Bagby, jr., 21-year-old offspring of a Cleveland World Series pitching hero, made his major league debut by turning back the world champions, 8 to 4, before an opening day crowd of 10,500.

This cool-headed, strong-armed youngster, called upon to pitch in the first regularly scheduled American League game he ever attended, worked only six innings, but he was credited with the victory, the score being tied 4-4 when he retired for a pinch-hitter while his teammates were driving Red Ruffing, the Yankee starter, from the mound.

The Sockers were trailing 4-2 in the sixth when Manager Joe Cronin started a furious uprising with a single. Before the side could be retired by fireballing Joe Vance, the Sockers had clinched matters by driving in six runs on five hits, three passes and a sacrifice, after sending 11 batters to the plate.

Ruffing bore the brunt of that rally and when he departed, the home forces, who had defied baseball tradition by opening the campaign with a rookie pitcher, had a 7-4 lead and the game, played between showers that caused a 10-minutes halt, safe in hand.

Bagby opened by fanning leadoff Frankie Crosetti and forced four more Yanks to whiff before he gave way to Leo Nonnenkamp with the score tied, two on and one out in the big Boston inning. Jim, jr., issued six passes but about half of them were ordered by Cronin.

Weaver to Pitch For Nats Today

Monte Weaver, aiming at a come-back after three dreary seasons with the Nats, is today's pitching choice of Manager Bucky Harris against the Athletics in the second game of the current series.

Weaver, heavier and healthier than in any previous season with the Nats, was the club's most consistent pitcher in the exhibition games and has been definitely installed as a regular starting member.

Verdict Won By Mamakos

Tony Ciaccio Is Beaten in Arena Feature.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

That delightful little ditty, "Three Blind Mice," was revived last night at Turner's Arena to the rhythmic thumping of Tony Ciaccio's fists on the head and ribs of youthful Steve Mamakos, as the Golden Greek won two of the eight rounds they fought and was awarded a unanimous decision.

You could see Steve, whose muscular, well-conditioned body gave him the appearance of an "I Can Make a New Man of You in Seven Days" advertisement, was startled at the decision. Probably because they omitted the blue ribbon and tissue-paper wrapping. The 900, or so, fans who witnessed the fiasco also were startled—so much so they only gulped twice, reached for their pocketbooks, and left hurriedly.

Refereen Ray Bowen gave Mamakos a three-point margin, 74-71; Lieut. Robert McFarland and Bob Mulhall, the judges, voted for Mamakos. The Golden Greek had a comfortable margin on the judges' cards. On The Post sheet he won the first two, held Ciaccio even in the fourth, and was badly beaten in the other five.

Took Verdict Calmly.

Ciaccio, surprisingly transformed from a rough-and-tumble brawler into a clean-cut, upright example of sportsmanship within the brief span of a few weeks, didn't protest the decision. He left the ring quickly, apparently satisfied with the verdict. It was not so when he fought and lost to George Abrams. He raved for hours about that decision, but last night he took it peacefully.

He even went so far as to suggest

Chicago Paid $185,000 Cash for Dizzy Dean

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 18.—The Chicago Cubs paid $185,000 in cash, second largest amount ever paid for a baseball star, for Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean.

This was in addition to three players turned over to the St. Louis Cardinals, making the deal worth $270,000. The players were Pitchers Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun and George (Tuck) Stainback, an outfielder. Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, regards the players obtained as being worth $85,000.

The amount of cash paid for Dean was disclosed reluctantly by Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, over the long distance telephone from his winter home in Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, today. Wrigley, breaking a precedent, revealed the amount since he said there appeared to be an insistent demand. He declared that he had always bene reluctant about injecting the "dollar sign" into baseball, believing that the fans were not so much interested in what the players cost, but what they delivered on the ball field.

Second to Cronin Deal.

The amount actually paid for Dean is second only to the reported $250,000, in addition to Lyn Larry, the Boston Red Sox gave Washington for Shortstop Joe Cronin in 1934. It takes rank with other staggering deals in baseball—the purchase of Babe Ruth by the Yankees from Boston for $135,000, the reported $200,000, plus five players which the Cubs paid Boston for Rogers Hornsby in 1928 and deals Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, made in selling Mickey Cochrane, Al Simmons, Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx each for a reported $100,000 or more.

The amount of cash involved in the Hornsby purchase was never announced, but Young Wrigley said it was far below the reported $200,000. The deal was made by his late father William Wrigley, jr.

"We have no desire to make any mystery out of the transaction which brought Dizzy Dean to the Cubs in exchange for Pitchers Davis and Shoun and Outfielder Stainback and a cash consideration.

Tried to Play Fair.

"We have always tried to play fair with the public and give it the best team it was possible for us to put on the field and I don't believe that the fans are interested so much in what a player costs or what salary he draws as they are in what he delivers on the ball field. For this reason I have always been reluctant about injecting the 'dollar sign' into baseball.

"Dizzy Dean was purchased because it was felt that he would strengthen the club and not simply for the purpose of trying to spend a lot of money.

"I don't think baseball fans look upon baseball as a dollar and cents proposition, and their interest in Dean is the same as ours—what will he do towards making the Cubs a pennant winning combination.

"Since there appears to be an insistent demand to know what Dean actually cost us, we paid $185,000 and the three players named.

"We are going to do our darndest this year, as we have been doing for the past two years, to win the pennant in the National League and then kick hell out of the Yankees."

The deal that has turned the Cubs from a rather solemn bunch of young men, hopeful, but none too certain of the future, into a cocky, noisy gang, absolutely certain of winning the pennant, was started during a fanning bee Wrigley was having with Manager Charley Grimm and his "brain trust"—Catcher Gabby Hartnett, Tony Lazzeri, and Coaches Roy Johnson and Johnny Cirridon—at the spring training camp a month ago.

Cubs Become Confident.

Wrigley wanted to know from them what the Cubs actually needed to make them a pennant winner. They told him that a top-ranking pitcher, capable of stopping the enemy, a man of the Dizzy Dean capabilities, was the important factor.

"All right," Wrigley told them, "I'll worry about the money. You fellows worry about what is going on on the ball field."

Nats

a high trajectory it arched over the head of Left Fielder Lou Finney and settled half way up in the bleachers—one of the longest homers on record at Griffith Stadium.

The Nats rode to victory on that home run by Bonura and another off the bat of Buddy Lewis. The young third baseman's clout was of the inside-the-park variety—a line drive to the farthest corner in centerfield, and it occurred with Mel Almada and Buddy Myer on base. The two homers accounted for exactly half of the Nats' dozen runs.

The 29,000 who watched Ferrell stagger to the finish, thrilled to the feats of Bonura, however. On his first appearance to the plate, the new first baseman introduced himself to Washington fans with a vicious line-drive single to leftfield, and following his home run in the sixth, he thumped a lusty single to center in the eighth.

They were captivated, too, by the performance of Rookie Taft Wright, the chunky outfielder who was playing his first league game in a Washington uniform. On the spot, with two men on base in the first inning, Wright celebrated his appearance with the Nats by driving over the first run of the game with a sharp single to right.

Ferrell Goes Route.

Ferrell, pitching with a sore shoulder that had required treatments until game time, lasted the nine-inning route because the Nats gave him large and comfortable leads. But he was wavering in the ninth when the A's, in a last-ditch uprising, rushed across 3 runs.

Harry Kelley was Manager Connie Mack's pitching choice and the veteran right-hander pitched himself into an early shower. He had a harrowing time of it in the first inning when the Nats knocked him loose from 4 runs and knocked him out of the box.

Mel Almada, whose hitting failures during the spring almost cost him his outfield job with the Nats, reformed suddenly yesterday and, on the second ball pitched, touched off the Washington attack with a lengthy double against the centerfield fence. Buddy Lewis drew a walk and Taft Wright brought the year's first run home with a single into rightfield.

Bonura drove the second run across with a line single into left and, with two out, Buddy Myer delivered the best blast of the inning—a triple into the centerfield corner that set the Nats up in a 4-to-0 lead. That blow sent Kelley out of the game and Almon Williams in.

That 4-0 lead looked comfortable enough but almost in a twinkling the A's tied the score in the third inning. A walk and two singles put three runners on base and Roy Johnson put 'em home with a lusty triple to right center. When Travis made a wild heave of the relay back to the infield, Johnson also scored and it was 4-4.

Williams was the victim of a pair of cheap infield hits by Cecil Travis and Buddy Myer in the fourth inning and a sacrifice and Wes Ferrell's infield out brought a run home. Almada breathed life into the rally with a single that Peters could only knock down and then along came Buddy Lewis. There was nothing cheap about Lewis' hit. It was a well-tagged liner that rolled to the centerfield corner and the third baseman, with a burst of sprinting, crossed the plate standing up for a home run. That made it 8-4.

In the fifth the Nats picked up another run when Wes Ferrell followed singles by Travis and Rick Ferrell with a single to right, but they didn't trifle with young Edgar Smith, the little southpaw who relieved Williams in the sixth.

Lewis coaxed a walk from Smith and when Bonura arrived at the plate he found two pals on base because Peters had dropped Werber's throw at second after the latter

Parmelee T. Captures Walbrook Purse, Feature at Havre de Grace

Walter Haight

I haven't written a line about the Kentucky Derby since yesterday, so I hope you will pardon me if I harp a bit on the Blue Grass Classic. The Derby is the sports-writer's delight. Anytime he gets floundering around for a column subject, the Derby always presents a perfect "out." Of course, the Derby is at its best as a space filler during the month preceding the race. However, it can be hopped on anytime during the year and seldom falls entirely flat.

HAIGHT.

I had intended to devote this to next Saturday's running of The Chesapeake at Havre de Grace but, in glancing over the eligibles for that race due the coming Saturday, I discovered that 22 out of the 34 horses entered are Derby hopes. I want that reader of mine to be well informed on the Kentucky race, so I guess I'll just two-finger along for a spell a la Churchill Downs.

The man responsible for most of the success of the Derby, modestly disclaims the major credit. He is Col. Matt J. Winn. It is rather difficult to believe that the Derby was once rated "just another race" by Eastern horsemen. Recently I talked to a veteran Maryland trainer and he told me that he once had horses who could beat Derby fields, but he and his employer didn't think the race was worth the trouble of shipping to Louisville.

Col. Winn took over the management of Churchill Downs in 1902. At that time, racing in general and Kentucky racing in particular was in a rather bad way. Winn stepped in and did a little reorganizing and a lot of fumigating. Even the natives in the State were frowning on the tracks. But Winn succeeded in coaxing them back as patrons. It was only a few years until the best people of Louisville and adjacent territory again subscribed to boxes.

The cleaning out of the bookmakers and the coming of the mutuel form of betting in 1908 was the start of Churchill Downs boom period. The patrons did not like the change at first, but soon became familiar with its operation.

Col. Winn has his favorites among the horses who have won the Derby. They are the thoroughbreds who did most to call the the attention of the entire Nation, through the newspapers, to the Kentucky classic. He won't admit it, but Donerail probably rates No. 1 in his book.

Donerail, winner of the 1913 Derby, gave the race a lot of publicity due to the fact that parimutuel payoff on him, across the board, was $184.90, $41.20 and $13.20. There was occasion for headlines in the fact that a Kentucky Derby winner had paid off at such handsome odds.

* * * *

The following year—1914—another winner wrote some headlines. That was gallant Old Rosebud. He ran the mile and a quarter in 2:03 2-5, which was a new record time, and which mark, by the way, endured until 1931, when Twenty Grand stepped the distance in 2:01 4-5.

The Kentucky Derby, from the time of its origin in 1875, always was open to any 3-year-old in America. But for a great many years the major number of entries were made by Kentuckians, or Western owners. Occasionally an Eastern horse would compete, but that did not happen often.

However, when it was flashed that Old Rosebud had raced at such speed, and when some turf experts were speculating as to whether or not the fastest horses weren't really being campaigned in the West, instead of the East—well, that's when Eastern owners began to eye the Kentucky Derby. As one direct result, Harry Payne Whitney entered his swift filly—Regret—in the 1915 Kentucky Derby and she registered a mighty surprise when she ran away with top honors.

So, once again, the Kentucky Derby, because of a singular and unusual accomplishment by the winning horse, achieved great publicity. Donerail started it, Old Rosebud kept up the momentum and Regret wrote the thrilling climax. It was after Regret won that the Easterners ceased looking at the Derby from a distance and began to ship its greatest horses to Louisville for competition in the Maytime classic.

West Coast Campaigner Pays $6.10

Beats Yellow Tulip by 3 Lengths; 12,000 See Day's Program.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, April 18.—More than 12,000 racing fans gathered here this afternoon — and they didn't come to roll Easter eggs. Instead they were giving the mutuel department a battle and those in the crowd who helped make Parmelee T. a $6.10 favorite cashed a bet, for the C. R. Fleischmann colt stepped off with the Walbrook Purse, the feature race.

Just how much the best was Parmelee T., a son of Victorian, who won a Preakness in the mud with Sonny Workman on his back, will never be known, but the colt did bounce to the finish line three lengths ahead of the Bomar Stable's Yellow Tulip and nine lengths in front of Giant Killer. Only two others, Sun Power and Mosawtre, went postward but they might as well have stayed in their barns.

Run on Sloppy Track.

The race was run over a sloppy track and under weeping skies. The heavy clouds which dripped occasionally as the program opened really went to work in earnest as the racing progressed.

Jockey Harry Richards, who has had trouble reaching the winners' circle in Maryland after a satisfactory winter on the West Coast, gave Parmelee T. a brilliant ride. The colt was inclined to be sluggish going to the first turn but Richards applied the bat and Parmelee T. assumed command before the field hit the turn.

From then on, Yellow Tulip did the chief chasing. The Bomar colt, urged by Jockey R. L. Vedder, tried his hardest to catch the flying pacemaker but tired under the strong handling in mid-stretch, allowing Parmelee T. to get a "breather" approaching the wire.

Star Struck Wins.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt annexed his second purse of the meeting by sending a first-time starter, Star Struck, out to cop the first race, a maiden event for 2-year-olds. The little filly scampered to the finish line a length and a half in front of Fictitious with War Moon, the public choice, third, in the field of nine. Star Struck had Flying Car as a running mate and the two stepped out in front of the field in the opening quarter. From where we sat, it looked as though Flying Car was eased along when Star Struck went on to take the purse. The Vanderbilt entry paid a $6.40 mutuel and Star Struck turned in the good time of 0:48 4-5 for the four furlongs.

Mrs. P. Da Lee Watts' Golden Vein overcame a habit of running second to win the second race. The gallant old son of Golden Spire had his running shoes on and came from back in the field to defeat, among others, Early Times and Fast Express. Apprentice J. Howell gave the winner a good ride and brought his backers a $7.90 mutuel.

After serving her apprenticeship in sprints, Vestale, a 3-year-old filly, proved that she could go a route by turning back a half dozen others at a mile and a sixteenth. Turkish Brand probably was best in the field for he was badly squeezed back leaving the gate and then made up all but a length and a half. Little Tramp, the favorite, was third. Vestale had plenty of backers in the crowd and paid $7.60.

HAVRE BRIEFS.

Dick Handlin sent the Foxcatcher Farm's Dauber, Preakness candidate, a mile and one-eighth Sunday in 1:57 3-5.

Dauber, who placed to Stagehand in the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, was in a running mood. With Maurice (Moose) Peters in the irons, the 3-year-old chestnut son of Pennant and Ship of War was timed the mile and one-eighth in 0:52, 1:18, 1:44, 1:57 3-5.

The Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip and Maj. Ral Parr's Hypocrite, both Preakness candidates, were given speed tests this morning. Bull Whip, bay son of Bull Dog and Anchorabolme, although working well out in the center of the track, was timed a mile in 1:45. Hypocrite did the eight panels in the excellent time of 1:42 3-5.

Hal Price Headley's Preakness candidate, Bourbon King, is due Wednesday from Kentucky. The bay son of Whichone is due to start in the Chesapeake here on April 23 before being sent to Pimlico for the Preakness. In his race here Bourbon King will be ridden by Raymond (Bonny) Workman, who is under contract to A. G. Vanderbilt.

A trio of candidates for the $7,500 Pimlico Oaks on May 7 were on the track Monday morning. Mrs. Elmer Trueman's Toddle On went three quarters in 1:16 2-5; H. P. Haughton's Roman Lady, a similar trial in 1:18 3-5, and J. J. Farrell's Nansemond, three quarters in 1:16.

SELECTIONS AT HAVRE DE GRACE.

Dear Al:

It developed yesterday that A. C. Compton's Sun Egret suffered a cut leg in the running of the Harford Handicap, which gives the Sun Briar colt plenty of excuse for his poor race in the sprint. While not serious, Trainer Guy Bedwell said that unless it heals quickly the colt may be kept in the barn Saturday when the Chesapeake field marches to the post. However, there is little chance that Sun Egret will be kept out of the Derby by the mishap.

Sonny Workman agreed yesterday to take the mount on Hal Price Headley's Bourbon King in Saturday's feature. Workman is learning to take it. The veteran Washington rider is in excellent form. He is applauded vigorously when he wins, but is forced to take some booing when he loses. However, Workman, who once argued with his critics, now laughs it off. He could ride my horse if I had one.

The man who manipulates the ancient approximate odds board here made a mistake and displayed odds of 5 to 7 on Postage Due in the fourth race. The press box boys thought they were in good old England.

Starter Jim Milton is suffering from a cold, but he is a veteran trouper and went right out there in the driving rain. The show must go on.

Max Smart, Washington trainer, has signed Eddie DeCamillis to a contract and the jockey promptly scored with Vestale. Jockey R. L. Vedder has signed with Frank Garrett. Ken McCombs is another to get under a new contract. He will ride henceforth for B. F. Whitaker.

BILL.

First race—Sea Shell handled a somewhat similar field in good style at Bowie and deserves the call in this field. Barker is a fair sort and should be a keen factor. Walli has shown flashes of early foot and may be better than generally rated.

Second race—Apprehend is last on the also eligible list and a doubtful starter. Gets the top spot if he goes postward despite the heavy weight assigned. Alit has worked briskly and loves this track. Miney Myerson probably will make a money appearance.

Third race—I'm going down swinging in this field if I go down. I'm going to take Needmore here. This one showed me enough at Bowie to indicate that the number will be hung up in the winning slot. Bejabbers comes to this recommended by some fast trials. Town Car and Dim Hope are money possibilities.

Fourth race—Room Service gets the right rider today in Ken McCombs and I look for a smashing effort. Cogie romped away from that Bowie field to win at the first asking and deserves attention. Maxine, winter campaigner, is reported fit and ready.

Fifth race—Toddle On, winner of the Maryland Futurity last fall, will be making her first start of the year. The possibility of an off track enhances her chances. She has worked excellently. Billmar won impressively here and is dangerous. Red Pepper may be understimated.

Sixth race—Dauber, second in the Santa Anita Derby, has been kept sharp since arriving from the West Coast and appears ready to defeat this field of Derby eligibles. Chaps gets second call. This one was running head and head with Aneroid when he changed strides in that Bowie race. If the top one fails, Chaps may take it all. Blind Eagle closed like the wind in that last.

Seventh race—Eversold seems to have too many guns for this gang and I look for the veteran to be right there at pay off time. Sun Mica and Mishipman to take care of the others.

Best bet—Room Service.

* * * *

Another afternoon runner, the Milky Way Farms' Tiger, ran the quarter in 0:24 2-5 and the half in 0:50 1-5 and then loafed out the three-quarter in 1:17 2-5, the mile in 1:45 2-5 and the mile and an eighth in 2:01 2-5. It was the day's longest workout.

150,000 Fans to See Opening Tilts Today

Six Remaining 'Firsts' on Program; DiMaggio Stays Unsigned Despite New Rumors.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, April 18.—Major league baseball's big push, launched today in only two American League sectors, extends to all fronts tomorrow with box-office records in prospect for club-owners and the answers to two big question marks, Joe DiMaggio and Dizzy Dean, agitating the Nation's sports-following millions.

Despite unsettled weather in the East, nearly 150,000 fans are expected to witness the six remaining opening games, including a full National League slate in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnti and St. Louis.

Including the Patriots' Day double-header, featuring the world champion Yankees and Red Sox in Boston, as well as the continuation of play in Washington, more than 200,000 spectators may witness the day's aggregate proceedings.

On all sides, meantime, the faithful argued the ultimate effect of the two biggest getaway issues in years (1) the continued deadlock between Holdout DiMaggio, who wants $40,000, and the Yankees, who won't pay him more than $25,000, and (2) whether the addition of Dean, most colorful pitcher in the game, will mean a National League pennant for the Chicago Cubs.

Forecast of DiMaggio's capitulation to Yankee terms, under the influence of opening day fever, failed to materialize but left most observers convinced it won't be long now. Neither club officials nor Jarring Joe, still at his home in San Francisco, made any apparent move toward settlement of their differences.

DiMaggio has ten days, or until April 28, to sign before automatically going on the suspended list. After that date he would have to apply for re-instatement, either to President Will Harridge of the American League or Commissioner K. M. Landis, before being permitted to return to action.

The encouragement thus given to such rival contenders as Detroit and Cleveland, if the Yankees lag during DiMaggio's absence, may turn the American League race into a free-for-all. It is no secret that club owners in the junior circuit fear the effects of a third straight runaway by the New Yorkers to a greater extent than the Nationals are worried about what will happen to them in the next World Series. This apprehension may soon be diminished.

Grissom or Schott To Face Bryant

Cincinnati, April 18 (AP).—Prospects of fair weather brought predictions from Cincinnati Reds officials today that 34,000 persons might jam Crosley Field Tuesday for the season's opener against the Chicago Cubs. Manager Charley Grimm named Clay Bryant to hurl for Chicago against either Gene Schott or Lee Grissom. If Schott pitches, Lombardi will catch, with Virg Davis scheduled to backstop in event Portsider Grissom goes to the mound.

30,000 to See Tribe Open With Browns

Cleveland, April 18 (AP).—Tomorrow's opening game between the Cleveland Indians and the St. Louis Browns may start to supply the answer as to who got the better deal in the winter swap between the clubs. The Indians sent Catcher Billy Sullivan and Second Baseman Roy Hughes to the Browns in return for Catcher Rollie Hemsley.

Cleveland officials said they expected at least 30,000 persons to see the teams perform under their new managers—Oscar Vitt of the Indians and Gabby Street of the Browns.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor

Trout are fair game in the streams of the Old Dominion State tomorrow. The season this year is five days later than usual, but five days earlier than the date the Virginia Fish Commissioners originally set, and would like to have held to. The closing day is July 5 instead of the proposed July 31st.

ACKERMAN.

As far as Washingtonians are concerned, this season promises to be outstanding; because they will really have excellent closeby fishing. Instead of the usual stocking of one stream in Fairfax County, this year there hase been a heavy planting in three. Difficult Run and its tributaries, Colvin Run nd Snake Den-Scott Run and Pimmet Run.

Pimmet Run, which flows into the Potomac at Chain Bridge, has almost 10 miles of fine spring-fed water, fast as well as beautiful. Trout have occasionally been caught in the headwaters for years. Reached, until Chain Bridge is completed, by way of Key Bridge; turning right at Cherrydale for 3 miles.

Scott's Run, although several miles shorter than Pimmet, is also spring fed and every bit as rugged and beautiful a streach of water. Reached from the Great Falls Pike at Swinks Mill.

Difficult Run, mouthing in the Potomac about a mile and a half this side of Great Falls, has seventeen miles of swell fishing water to its head just west of Fairfax—to be exact, between Jermantown and Pendar. In addition there are real possibilities in every one of its branches (two have been stocked) so that, less than 30 minutes drive from downtown Washington, we have some 70 miles of fishing water.

The headwaters may be reached from Route 211, 2 miles beyond Jermantown, as well as from the road that brances right a ½ mile out of Jermantown.

If you fish from the Great Falls Pike go to your left, up the stream. There is a streach of about 3 miles to the Leesburg Pike (Route 7).

Probably the best point to get to the heart of Difficult is from the road from Oakton to Hunter, and within a ½ mile of the latter place. Also from here, it is only a short distance upstream to the mouth of Little Difficult, as well as Snake Den Branch and The Glade.

Snake Den has always been noted as excellent trouting water, and fine fish have been taken here every year, although most of them were killed from the sawdust pollution of several years' operation of a mill shortly after the war. This year's stocking should be the means of bringing it back.

Colvin Run, probably better known as Wheelers Mill Run, heads between Wiehl and Herndon and mouths in Difficult several miles west of the Leesburg pike. Has been heavily stocked for several years, and if past performance is any criterion, a good section to stay away from on opening day.

Much of this stream is on private property, but unposted. Reasonable care should be used in reaching and fishing it.

So many embryo anglers ask about the most suitable length and weight of a fly rod, and when we recommend one from 6½ to 7½ feet, express their doubt as to its suitability. Probably due to having heard about or read of the 9 to 12 foot rods, so common in the Northern woods.

The dense overhanging brush that is so much a part of our Maryland and Virginia streams makes the shorter rods far more desirable and easy to handle. A weight of from two to th ee and a half ounces is about right, with a line from D to F, whichever fits the individual rod of your selection best.

Mike Belloise Wins.

New York, April 18 (AP).—Mike Belloise, former New York State featherweight hampion, jabbed and hooked his way to an easy decision tonight over Young Chappie, of Albany, N. Y., in the eight-round feature bout at St. Nicholas Palace. Belloise weighed 131¼, Chappie 134¼.

Blue Devils Trim Terps In 2 Games

Duke Bats Hard to Win, 9 to 7 and 8 to 2, Over Maryland Team.

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., April 18.—Duke's Blue Devils swept a Southern Conference baseball double-header with previously unbeaten Maryland today, taking the free-hitting opener, 9-7, and then capturing the nightcap, 8-2, behind the five-hit pitching of Dave Smith.

Home run clouts by Duke sluggers came at crucial times in both games.

204 Will Compete In Marathon Race

Boston, April 18 (AP).—Two hundred and four marathon runners will toe the mark tomorrow at noon in suburban Hopkinton for what should prove to be one of the most thrilling Boston marathons in its 42-year history.

Stars from all over the Nation, Canada, Greece and England wound up training yesterday, but so strong was the caliber of the field that no one has been installed a favorite.

Mr. Roosevelt Makes Shortest Pitch on Record at Inaugural faultless tread the band led both clubs out to the flag-staff and back to home-plate. There the players arrayed themselves in a zig-zaggy line to await the Presidential pitch.

Grimth, noting the absence of Connie Mack, veteran Philadelphia pilot, motioned him from his dugout, and went to meet him at home-plate. They doffed hats and shook hands cordially before Grimth escorted the tall, gaunt strategian to the Presidential box.

The President was solicitous about Mack's health, and learned that he was "feeling fine and I expect to have a big season." It was good to be here for another opening day, he opined.

Shortest on record was the Presidential heave—a fast ball right down the alley into the palms of Jimmy DeShong. Zeke Bonura danced around behind both teams, waving his arms and shouting:

"Out here, Mr. President. Throw it out here," while Mr. Roosevelt posed, arm overhead, while camera shutters clicked, light-bulbs flashed miniature streaks of lightning on the gray day, and newsreels recorded the scene for posterity.

Before the game Uncle Nick Altrock sat quietly in the dugout munching contentedly on his cud, while all others on the bench were nervous, excited, and anxious to play ball. Al Simmons jumped around like the St. Vitus dance afflicted by a seven-day itch.

"It's wonderful to be here on opening day," he grinned to a companion. "Nothing like this in Detroit or Chicago—it's just another ball game. But here, you have color, life and action. It's great," and he seemed to inhale the atmosphere in great lungfuls.

Pregame preliminaries were over now. Col. Starling, chief of Secret Service men attending the President glowered down on grandees on the steps to the dressing room and ordered them out. Manager Bucky Harris came back from his conference at home plate with Earl Mack and the umpires.

"All right," he said, "let's get out there and play some baseball." Bill McGowan, umpire behind the plate, dusted it off, motioned for the team and the Nats rushed like a squad of freshmen football players to greet the 1938 campaign.

was good for two sacks when George Selkirk juggled the bounce, gave the Red Sox their first run in the opening inning when Ben Chapman's homer over the leftfield wall pulled them even at 2-all in the second, after Tom Henrich's single brought in Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey for the Yanks.

The rookie fell into a deep hole in the third when Myril Hoag, filling for Houdout Joe DiMaggio, drove in the other pair of New York tallies by singling with the bases loaded and none out. Bagby then dug himself out by fanning Joe Gordon and Ruffing and forcing Crosetti to ground out with two of his mates on base.

fielded Wright's grounder. It was at this point that Bonura thumped his homer into the left field stands.

That made the score 12-5, for the A's had picked up a run on Lodgiani's double and Hayes' single in the seventh. But Ferrell seemingly had only to coast into the finish. However, in the ninth, the A's brought him up sharply when Werber knocked out his fourth single of the game, and Barna and Lodgiani followed with singles that brought a run across. With two mates still on the bases, Gene Hasson, rookie first baseman, thumped a three-bagger into right field and the A's had cut the Nats' lead to 12-8.

That was the best they could do.

to one reporter that it was "a good fight," and that they should be rematched.

Mamakos was no match for his more experienced adversary. Time and again his head jerked back convulsively as Ciaccio's piston-like right exploded on his chin at close quarters. At least a half dozen times he was spun halfway around as the Pennsylvania Italian pummeled him with rights to the head.

Ciaccio Draws Blood.

Once, when Ciaccio cracked him flush on the mouth with a window-rattling right, blood spurted forth. He forced the fighting, but pawed only weakly at his tormentor after the fourth round. He couldn't figure out Ciaccio's puzzling crouch and cover style of fighting. His blows glanced harmlessly off Tony's well-protected head. He forced the fighting, which, in the officials' eyes was sufficient to win the fight, but it was his heart, not his padded hands, which carried him through.

Mamakos was a pitiful figure in the sixth, his eyes glazed, armweary, and a badly beaten, bewildered young man. He had the heart—heart that kept him on his feet when others would gladly have toppled to the carpet and gratefully heard 10 counted over them, but he still was in over his head. He had the heart and stamina enough to take Ciaccio's right when he was winding up and pegging it from a distance of 4 feet and plugging his objective, Steve's iron jaw, with bull's-eye accuracy.

Ciaccio might have lost, by all standards of judging ring battles, but it is still difficult to figure out why he didn't protest. He wasn't beaten that badly—if at all.

Joey Spangler, 151 pounds, was awarded a three-round technical knockout over popular El Brookman after opening a razor-thin gash on his left eyelid. The wound spouted blood and to continue might have led to serious consequences for the willing and rugged District boy. Brookman, also 151 pounds, was comfortably ahead on points until butted into defeat.

Joey Teemes, 133¼, and Al Rowan, 138½, manufactured a furious six-rounder, with Teemes winning a majority decision. The lunch-counter clouter scored heavily with looping rights to the head and forced the fighting. He took several good shots to the head in good fashion and finished at a brisk clip.

Fred Wallmyer, 163½, of Richmond, rallied in the last two rounds of a four-round opener to win a close decision from Buddy Thomas. Thomas' clever boxing saved him in the first two heats, but Wallmyer was too rugged for him.

Making his first start here since bowing to Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers last summer at the ball park, Howard Scott made a strong finish against Johnny Murray, of New York, to win a 2-1 decision. Scott came in at 139½ pounds, and his opponent at 141½.

The Cowboy's punching was not as sharp as it might be, and seemed to lack steam, or a half dozen good right hands he bounced off the Gotham gloveman's chin would have put him to sleep. Murray's long suit was body punching and he ribbed away at Scott's ribs with both hands until said ribs assumed a glowing pink color.

Wes Ferrell Hurls Under Difficulties

Has 'Ailing Shoulder;' Bonura Hits Homer for Mr. Garner.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Wes Ferrell pitched through the entire game yesterday with a painful kink in his left shoulder that bound him so tightly he could not see many of the balls he threw until after they reached the plate.

In the Boston Bees' first exhibition game here last week, Ferrell felt the twist after retiring the last batter with an off-balance throw. He applied packs and a mustard plaster and it apparently was cured.

However, the pain was noticeable after throwing a few warm-up pitches yesterday, and it continued to aggravate him as the game went on. The Nats' hurling staff mainstay said he would "see every doctor in town" in an effort to be cured before his next turn on the mound, in the Yankee series in New York.

Jimmy Wasdell, chanting "It's great to be on a winner, boys, great to be on a winner," led the Nats' dressing-room chorus after the game. Al Simmons and Goose Goslin also were loud on the vocal chords, while Zeke Bonura was no sissy.

Buddy Lewis chanted, "Only 153 more to go, boys." Harris greeted Ferrell with "Nice going, slug!"

Ferrell was the recipient of handshakes by the entire squad, while Bonura took a good-natured riding from his buddies about the ponderous homer.

While talking to Garner before the game started, the Vice President pointed to the leftfield bleachers and said, "Let's see you put one in there." Zeke called it a coincidence.

Bonura received a telegram from his mother that contained only nine words, but they were very effective. It said, "Good luck; hit that ball; God bless you—Mother."

Al Simmons gave Rookie Taft Wright a dressing room lecture after the game on how to play balls off that rightfield fence. The rookie performed acceptably with two hits in five trips to the plate, and handled one chance afield. He also chased some of the A's extra-base hits in the centerfield corner.

Interviewed on the radio before the game, Al Simmons was asked about his own amateur photography and replied it might be a good thing he has another business because he didn't see his name in that starting lineup today.

Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley oblised Johnny Mihalic by standing and doffing their hats as the Nats' infielder was busy with his movie camera before the game. Bonura and Simmons also were active as the President's car drove in and the teams were standing in line.

Russ Peters' sensational stop of Almada's grounder probably amazed Buddy Myer more than it did the 29,000 fans who cheered loud and long and Myer didn't even see the catch.

Myer, on second base, took one look at the ball going to center field for what looked like a two-base hit and started for home. He said he couldn't believe his eyes when he saw Coach Clyde Milan hold him at third base, after Peters retrieved the ball with a dive to the ground.

Connie Mack left the park with Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley, in company with several Secret Service men. He didn't visit the dressing room of the Athletics.

The three loudest cheers of the day were for Peters' stop of Almada's hit, Bonura's home run and the Boston Red Sox scoring six runs against the Yankees in the opening game in the Hub, when the latter was flashed on the scoreboard.

Goose Goslin was running around like a rookie just up from the minors. The Goose said those Detroit openers couldn't compare with the color of the Capital City affairs, and he was glad to be back. He added to the din of the dressing room after the game with "Well Zeke, I see you hit one for Nance."

This Morning

two other occasions he rapped out line drives.

The manner in which Taft Wright met the issue was not exactly displeasing to Harris, either. Hailed as the rookie hitting sensation of the Nats, young Wright wasted little time in earning the plaudits of Washington fans. It was he who produced the first run of the game with a crisp single in the opening inning.

And there were other items to make it a happy afternoon for Harris . . . that triple by Buddy Myer in the first inning, the kind of a sock that used to rattle regularly from his bat three seasons ago . . . Cecil Travis' demonstration that he has finally learned to play shortstop and those two double-plays he started . . . the ability of the Nats to go out and get runs in bunches, if need be . . . and Wes Ferrell's willingness to go out there, sore shoulder and all, and pitch.

Ground to Be Broken For 'New Waterfront'

Senator Copeland to Lead Ceremonies Inaugurating $2,800,000 Project Today at Tenth and Water Streets Southwest.

By Dan F. Craig.

Ground breaking ceremonies for Washington's $2,800,000 waterfront improvement program will take place today at Tenth and Water streets southwest. The long-awaited plan, coming at a time when boating interest nears an all-time high, marks the beginning of a new era for pleasure boat owners, and the beginning of the end for the shabby, clapboard eyesores that now line the Washington Channel.

A distinguished committee of officialdom will participate in the opening ceremonies. Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, will pilot the dredge when it takes its first bite of harbor mud, inaugurating an eight-year program. Under Army Engineers, modern yacht basins, new wharves, and buildings patterned after the Williamsburg Restoration will replace the inadequate, nondescript piers that now constitute the only facilities for boat owners.

Others on the committee will include Senator William H. King, Utah, District committee chairman; Representative Joseph J. Mansfield, Texas, chairman House Rivers and Harbors Committee; District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, and Edward F. Calladay, president of the Washington Board of Trade, which sponsored the affair.

Grandstands and a speaker's platform will be placed aboard a barge moored off the bank, and at 3:30 p. m. the ceremonies get under way.

According to Maj. W. D. Lupiow, engineer officer in charge, $350,000 has been appropriated calling for construction this year of two large yacht basins and clearing of two sizable areas. Both are along Water street, one from Eleventh to Fourteenth street and the other from Tenth street to the Occoquan wharf.

Army dredges will be used on preliminary work of clearing old pilings and debris from these areas and dredging and bulkheading to within approximately 30 feet of the sidewalk along Water street. Contracts will then be let for the construction of yacht basins in the cleared areas.

Due to lack of sufficient appropriations, the two yacht basins to be built this year will each form one half of a completed unit, probably open to boat owners late next fall, according to the Engineers Office. Each basin will accommodate 60 or more cruisers and sailboats of 30 feet and over.

Further plans include the erection of a building to house marine supply dealers on the Fourteenth and Water street basin. The plant will be built complete with an electric hoist, together with modern facilities for marine service.

Best Laugh Of the Week

Browns Offer $150,000 for Joe DiMaggio.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 18.—The St. Louis Browns offered the New York Yankees "right at" $150,000 for Joe DiMaggio but failed to swing the deal, it was learned tonight.

Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the world champion club, was quoted by the Globe-Democrat as saying in a telephone conversation that his star outfielder, at present a stubborn holdout, "is not for sale at any price."

President Don Barnes of the Browns admitted he had made an "offer in six figures." It was from a reliable source the offer approximated $150,000 cash.

New York, April 18 (AP).—Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, said tonight that he had heard nothing at all about the St. Louis Browns' offer for Joe DiMaggio and that the champions' star outfielder, now a holdout, was "not for sale for cash or players."

"Make that emphatic," said Barrow. "The offer was made indirectly, I understand, but there is no possible chance he will be traded or sold. We are not considering it."

The New York Sun said today that DiMaggio had "agreed to terms" and that "some time today or tomorrow he will call Edward G. Barrow and notify him of his decision."

Housing Loans Are Held Safe Bank Business

FHA Property Improvement Aid Is Indorsed by Thomas J. Groom.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Praise for Federal Housing Administration property improvement loans is offered by the District of Columbia Bankers Association, which has been engaged in a third co-operative advertising campaign for promotion of such assistance.

"We know from our own experience that the property improvement loans made under Title One are good and safe business for the banks," Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier, Bank of Commerce & Savings, and president of the association, says in an article appearing in The Insured Mortgage Portfolio, official publication of the Housing Administration.

"Yet we have been carrying through this campaign primarily for the purpose of stimulating the local employment situation which means ultimately even better business for the banks," he continued. "We recognize that work in the building trades is the most urgent need at the present time for business as a whole. We know, also from our own experience, that co-operative newspaper advertising of Title One loans is an effective means of stimulating building activity."

Mr. Groom said his association's first co-operative effort to promote insured character loans for modernization and improvements of existing structures began immediately after the original Modernization Credit Plan was put into effect by the Housing Administration in September, 1934. The second began when the plan was amplified and extended in April, 1935. Its third began shortly after passage of the amended national housing act last February, which restored this type of loan to the measure.

Results Beneficial.

"Results of these two campaigns were beneficial to the co-operating banks, to the borrowers, to contractors and builders, to workers in the building trades, and to the public," Mr. Groom wrote. "The 21 District institutions made 10,626 loans for a total of $5,388,999. Loans made for improvement of properties within the District numbered 9,172, totaling $4,568,035. Thus far the FHA has been required to pay for claims in connection with these last. Eight of the institutions, in fact, have yet to submit a single report of loss on loans made in or out of the District."

The campaign, which Mr. Groom described as a "good example of practical co-operation among banking institutions," is simplicity itself. It consisted of a series of quarter page newspaper advertisements, prepared and placed periodically, with the cost being borne by the co-operating institutions in proportion to their total resources.

Mr. Groom said his association felt that maximum stimulation of home improvement work and em-

Stock Prices Turn Downward With Doubts on Spending Plan

Steel and Motor Shares Lead Relapse as Trading Volume Shrinks; U. S. Government Bonds Continue Advance.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, April 18.—Stocks about-faced in today's market as inflation fever cooled and a battle over phases of the Administration's "pump-priming" program loomed in Congress. While volume dwindled substantially on the set-back, leading industrials that rallied sharply last week gave up fractions to 3 or more points.

Profit selling appeared early when trading doubts arose over whether the spending-lending proposals, even if they get final legislative approval, would take hold as an immediate antidote for the recession.

Tending to dim speculative ideas also was a dead-lock of the House-Senate tax revision conferees, with the possibility alterations in the revenue bill desired by financial quarters might come a cropper if White House disapproval of some parts of the measure is stressed.

The list was fairly steady at the start, but offerings in steels and motors became more persistent and there was a quiet relapse near the second hour. There were intervals in which mild buying support cut losses, but these generally failed to follow through. Another slip-up was suffered on the final lap, but most leaders managed to emerge somewhat better than their worst.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .7 of a point at 40.5. Transfers amounted to 857,160 shares compared with the two-hour turnover of 1,057,860 Saturday and 1,009,480 in the full Friday session, on both of which days the trend was on the rallying side.

Commodities shifted in varying directions. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to up 1 cent a bushel and corn off ⅛ to ½. Cotton gained 20 to 40 cents a bale. At the same time futures of lead, copper, hides, rubber and tin were higher.

Clews from overseas were lacking as the principal European markets remained closed in observance of the final Easter holiday there. Helpful, though, was the brighter peace outlook abroad as a result of the Anglo-Italian accord. The principal foreign currencies were up in terms of the dollar.

Steel Prospects.

Market considerations included an estimated slight dip in this week's steel production and a substantial increase in commercial failures over the preceding week and the same week a year ago.

Du Pont shares dropped 3¾ points to 106¾ when the company reported net for the first quarter of 65 cents on the common against $1.34 in the same 1937 period.

Douglas Aircraft, disclosing a pickup in earnings for the quarter ended February 28, with deliveries topping the same period a year ago by about 100 per cent, was down 1⅛ at 41⅛. International Telephone, with important properties in Spain, was the most active stock of the day, apparently aided by probabilities the civil war in that country would end quickly. The issue was up ⅜ of a point at 8¼.

Among prominent losers were U. S. Steel at 47¾, Bethlehem 50¼, Westinghouse 76¾, Chrysler 46⅜, General Motors 35, Anaconda 30, Kennecott 35½, Sears Roebuck 60½, Loew's 41¾, J. I. Case 78⅛, U. S. Rubber 27, Union Carbide 69½ and Texas Corp. 40¼.

Likelihood of a cut in the dividend of Public Service of N. J., forecast by President McCarter because of lower earnings, depressed this stock 1½ points at 28½.

The majority of rails and utilities held declines to minor fractions.

Treasury Bonds Gain.

With demand still whetted by prospects of a huge increase in bank reserves under the Federal Administration's recovery program, U. S. Government issues continued to hold undisputed leadership of the bond market today.

Barring a few Treasury obligations which suffered minor setbacks under profit-selling, the Federal list pushed ahead for new gains ranging from 2/32ds of a point to 15/32ds of a point.

The pace of the rise was more moderate than Saturday when several Treasuries soared up a point or more, but the cumulative gains since the President announced his plans for a business recovery drive on Thursday were said by Government dealers to be the largest for a comparable period in well over a year.

Strength of the Federal list had a bracing effect on the general run of corporate issues, particularly the low-yield ratings. It also tended to nullify the influence of a reactionary stock list, although some secondary loans, chiefly rails, fell back with equities.

Leading the upturn in Governments were Federal Farm Mortgage, 2¾, and Home Owners Loan Corporation 3s. The former rose slightly more than a point while the latter gained ¾. Both recorded a good turnover. Most Treasuries also showed fair activity.

The best gains in the Treasury group were in the 4¼s, up 9-32; 2¾s, 1954-51, up 8-32; 3¾s, 1943-40, up 7-32, and 3¾s up 6-32.

Higher in the corporate division were Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Southwestern Division, at 31½, up 2; Chicago & Western Indiana 4s at 79, up 4; Bethlehem Steel 3¾s at 93¾, up 1; International Telephone 5s at 55, up 1¼; Studebaker 6s at 61, up 1⅞; Lehigh Valley 5s at 22, up 2½; Louisville & Nashville first 4s, 2003, at 79¾, up 3¼; United Drug 5s at 77½, up 4¾.

Key loans in the foreign sector were mostly higher in response to reports of favorable international response to the Anglo-Italian accord. Turnover amounted to $5,590,975, face value compared with $5,865,500 on Thursday.

Ill. Central Issues Report to Employes

Chicago, April 18.—L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central Railway System, issued today a financial report to employes which supplements the annual report to stockholders, following the example recently set by the Johns-Manville Corporation.

"Just two things kept us from losing money in 1937," Mr. Downs says, "painful economies toward the end of the year that just did keep us ahead of the current business recession and the transfer of retirement tax charges from one year to another, favoring 1937. You all will recall the latter transaction, because at the same time certain accumulated taxes were returned to all of you on the same account."

Closing Rally Helps Prices In Wheat Pit

Early Declines Up to 1⅜ Cents a Bushel Precede Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 18.—In a brisk rally at the last today wheat scored a cent a bushel net gain in some cases, after earlier tumbles of 1⅜ cents. Late scarcity of offerings made many previous speculative sellers reverse their market position, and started prices upward. Numerous dispatches from crop observers Southwest were received emphasizing recent frost damage.

Helping the upturn here was independent strength shown by the Winnipeg market, where settlement of the Canadian seamen's strike was a factor.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to 1 cent higher, compared with Saturday's finish. May, 84⅛@84⅜; July, 82⅝@82¾. Corn, ⅛ to ½ down; May, 59¾@60; July, 61⅝. Oats, ⅛ to ⅜ advanced. Rye, ¼ to ¾ up. Provisions unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Jesse James On Mat Card

JESSE JAMES.

Meets Jose Rodriguez in Added Bout.

Jesse James, handsome collector of antiques who numbers the light-heavyweight wrestling championship among his curiosities, has been added to Thursday night's mat program. He'll meet Jose Rodriguez, of old Mexico and curly sideburns, in a 45-minute semifinal.

Joe Savoldi, retired Notre Dame grid star, and Chief Thunderbird, are to supply the main bout—and that is where James comes in. Not this week, but here's how matters stand:

Maestro Joe Turner, who picks quarrels among the boys for the fans' benefit, is trying to match Savoldi with James or Jimmy Londos, who displayed his talents here recently against Dr. Murphy. Turner would like to inaugurate the outdoor season with a Savoldi-Londos match, but also would like to get Joe in against James.

If things go well Thursday night, and they should, Savoldi and the popular young Greek star may match holds in the final indoor show of the year. Then Savoldi would be ready to go against Londos.

It may not be as simple as that, however, for Thunderbird is hankering for outdoor work, preferably in feature roles, and will be out to upset Savoldi. Thunderbird only recently returned East after a good campaign in the West, and will have something new for the fans in wrestling tactics.

Should Savoldi and Londos be matched it will be the "rubber" in their series, for Joe, if you recall, once threw the Greek when the latter ruled the mat world.—ATCHISON.

Anacostians Play Today

Meet Bethesda Team at Garrett Park.

Anacostia High School, baby of the interhigh series, will attempt to crash the win column when they meet the Bethesda Chevy Chase nine today at 3:15 p. m. on the Garrett Park Field.

The Indians, who lost the series opener to Wilson, 7-4, are anxious to prove that they have a better ball club than the inaugural tilt indicated. The excitement and nervousness that usual prevails during the hullabaloo of an opener will probably be gone, and the Anacostians will settle down for some real ball playing.

Coach Rolland Lund, who is Big Chief at the Indian reservation, will start the same lads that played against Wilson. They are: Earl Smith, third baseman; Perry Seaman, short stop; Tom Hutchinson, centerfield; Robert Gordon, rightfielder; Arthur Faircloth, leftfielder; Lambert Anderson, second baseman; Otis Scott, first baseman; Robert Hagerdorn, catcher, and Jack Burroughs, pitcher. The only possible changes might be Faircloth or Hutchinson on the mound instead of in the outfield.

Bethesda, which won its first game from Gaithersburg, will probably send the following lads into action: Fred Mizell, centerfield; Pete Smith, third base; Custer, first base; Bill Morell, second base; Phil Vannais, leftfield; Billy Fuller, rightfield; Eliot Young, catcher; John Shumate, short stop, and either Leon "Lefty" Vannais, or Louie Kengla, doing the hurling.

W. & L. Nine Defeats Foe

Washington-Lee High School's strong baseball nine added another victim to its string of victories by defeating South River High, a New Jersey outfit, 11-6, on the winners home field at Arlington yesterday.

A seventh inning four-bagger by Homer Sprinkle, the Generals classy second baseman, tucked the game safely away. Besides the circuit smash, Sprinkle banged out two singles to snare the hitting honors for the day.

Bob Burns Says—

I sat in on a meeting of a bunch of movin' picture producers the other night and one of 'em suggested that they make pictures a little more true to life. I came right out and told 'em I didn't think people would wanta see pictures like that because real life is sometimes a little too blunt. It would just take the sweetness and excitement outa the romance.

I remember down home a boy was engaged to a girl and they decided to elope like they do in pictures. They laid their plans carefully and in secret, and that night he sneaked up to her window and put a ladder against the wall real easy and she came down. Then, so he wouldn't leave any evidence, he started to take the ladder away, when her paw stuck his head outa the second-story window and said "Leave that ladder there, young fella, I've still got a couple of daughters I wanta get off my hands."

Navajos Bring Dances Rarely Seen to Festival

'Yei Be-Chai' and Fire Rite Parts of Nine-Night Ceremonial.

Ceremonials which have rarely been seen off their reservation will be presented at the National Folk Festival by a group of young Navajos from the Santa Fe Indian School in New Mexico.

The "yei be-chai" dance, which is part of a nine-night ceremony for the sick, and the great fire dance will feature their part of the program—other dances of which will be the skip dance, round dance, two-step dance and feather dance.

The Navajo gift songs will also be presented by this group of braves. These songs may be sung any time, but usually are sung during the summer at the door of a sick man or woman to whom the Indians have brought gifts. Bridles, belts, blankets, turquoise, meat or any other valuable may be left outside the hogan when the songs are finished.

Ceremonial for Sick.

The skip dance is done either in the spring or summer and is sometimes called the "squaw dance." The round dance is sometimes done for a sick person— to take his mind from his illness—but usually is purely a social dance, as is also the feather dance.

The feather dance is part of the Navajo fire ceremonial which lasts nine days and is held for a sick person. The fire dance, according to Navajo custom, is given in the middle of this ceremonial on the ninth night.

In the "yei be-chai" dance there is no drum accompaniment. The dancers sing and use rattles. At times, a tone is snapped off like a shrill yelp, as if suggested by the howling of the coyote. In the refrain of the song, the singer bursts out into the strange cry of the Yebichai—"O ho ho ho! E he he he!"

Dance Carefully Guarded.

"Altogether, the 'yei be-chai' is tremendously wild and vital," an authority on Indian dances has written. It closes with the "bluebrid song," just at sunrise on the last morning.

With the Indian his dances often are his prayers. This, with other factors, has accounted for the fact that the dances often have been carefully guarded and even today it is a rare privilege for anyone to be permitted to attend an all-night dance-ritual of any of the tribes.

The Navajos, who come to the festival at Constitution Hall May 6, 7, and 8, will be led by Ambrose Ronas and will be under the sponsorship of the Indian Office. The festival has official recognition from the Indian Office as a desirable medium of presenting the Indian arts in a truthful and authentic setting.

A fine exhibit of Navajo silverwork will be on display as part of the folkcraft display of the festival. Tickets for all six festival programs now are on sale at The Washington Post.

Princess Troubetzkoy Stricken; Gained World Fame as Writer

Author Is Critically Ill at Estate Near Charlottesville.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—Princess Pierre (Amelie Louise Rives) Troubetzkoy, 75, celebrated novelist and playwright, is critically ill at Castle Hill, her historic estate near here.

The princess is a granddaughter of William Cabell Rives, one of the most prominent statesmen of his day. In 1809-11 he studied law under Thomas Jefferson; was member of the House of Representatives, 1823-29; United States minister to France, 1829-32; United States Senator from Virginia, 1832-45; again United States minister to France, 1849-53, after which he retired to private life and spent his remaining years at Castle Hill, built in 1764 by Dr. Thomas Walker, noted physician of that period.

Princess Troubetzkoy was born in Richmond, Va., August 23, 1863, daughter of Col. Alfred Landon Rives, who was born at Castle Hill. Her mother was Sadie McMurdo, daughter of James B. McMurdo, of Richmond. Col. Rives graduated at the Paris Eccle des Ponts et Chaussees in 1850. He assisted Gen. Meigs as architect in the construction of the new Capitol wing at Washington, also was architect of Cabin John Bridge, near Washington. For some time he served as chief of military engineers in the Confederate army, after which he had charge of the civil engineer department on the Panama Canal until 1894.

Amelie Rives married John Armstrong Challoner, of New York, a cousin of the Astors. Divorced from him on the ground of incompatibility, she was married to Prince Troubetzkoy, noted Russian painter, in 1895. His death occurred two years ago.

She made her entry into the world of letters 50 years ago and scored almost instant success by publication of her first story, "A Brother to Dragons." This bit of fiction caught the popular fancy at once and literary critics proclaimed the advent of a new and brilliant star.

In quick succession followed her other works—"The Farrier Lass o' Piping Pebworth," "Virginia of Virginia," "Nurse Crumpet Tells the Story," "Herod and Mariamne," "The Quick or the Dead," "Asmodeus," "Athelwold," "Witness of the Sun," "Tanis, the Sang Digger," and "A Damsel Errant."

The Princess has two sisters, Gertrude, of Gordonsville, Va., widow of Allen Potts, Richmond newspaperman, and Miss Sarah Landon Rives, who makes her home at Castle Hill.

Receiver Fees For Railroads Are Protested

Coal Consumers' Counsel Asks I. C. C. to Limit Legal Charges.

A protest against what it termed "exorbitant fees" to attorneys in railroad bankruptcy and receivership matters was placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by the Consumers Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission.

The I. C. C. was asked to declare as a matter of policy that the actual value of the services to the bankrupt estate be made the basis for fixing the maximum limits of such fees. The commission also was represented to state as a matter of policy that "no attorney fees in any railroad reorganization proceeding shall be approved by the commission until the plan of reorganization is finally adopted."

The brief, filed by John Carson, Consumers' Counsel, opposed the petition of Ernest Ballard, Chicago attorney, for an additional fee of $25,000 for drafting and presenting a reorganization plan for the insolvent Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway Co. Ballard already has been paid $27,000 gor legal services in the case, the brief states.

Carson emphasized that one-third of the total freight revenue of the C. & E. I. is paid by consumers of bituminous coal. "They have in addition," he states, "a very important right in the maintenance of facilities for the efficient transportation of coal and therefore an important interest in financial practices which contribute to the destruction of the credit of a railroad which serves them.

"Whatever Mr. Ballard has received," the brief declared, "or gets in the way of attorney's fees from the bankrupt estate, is actually money being paid by the public; coal consumers paying freight rates on coal transported over the C. & E. I. road contribute to his fees, as do all other customers of the line."

Mikado Opens 12-Day Opera Series in D.C.

Viola Production at Rialto Is a Lusty Gilbert and Sullivan.

The Mikado, by Sir W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan; presented by J. Franklin Viola, with Frank Moulan, stage director, and Max Fiehandler, musical director. The cast: The Mikado, William Danforth; Nanki-Poo, James Montgomery; Ko-Ko, Frank Moulan; Poo-Bah, Detmar Poppen; Pish-Tush, John Eaton; Yum-Yum, Kathryn Reece; Pitti-Sing, Frances Baviello; Peep-Bo, Eleanor Gilmore, and Katisha, Anne Yago.

With unusual gusto last night's production of the Mikado opened a 12-day season of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas at the Rialto Theater.

Frank Moulan, who not only carried the part of Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner, but was stage director as well, brought a new and fascinating elfishness to the role. Apparently influenced by the idiosyncracies of Charlie McCarthy, he manages to make Ko-Ko a thoroughly vital person afflicted with the equeamishness, so far as performing his headman's duties are concerned, that is essential to the entire libretto.

He is excellently supported by Detmar Poppen as Pooh-Bah, Lord High Everything Else, who manages to be sedate and laughable at the same time.

The three sisters, Yum-Yum, played by Kathryn Reece, Pitti-Sing, staged by Frances Baviello, and Peep-Bo, acted by Eleanor Gilmore, are not only able vocalists but actresses as well. Anne Yago as Katisha, the elderly lady of the court, plays her difficult part with a verve and vigor which drew much applause from the audience.

The Mikado, as portrayed by William Danforth, is an overwhelming ruler, who strikes fear into the hearts of all his subjects including his son, Nanki-Poo, played by James Montgomery. Danforth is an excellent dead-pan comedian who can be humorous without losing touch with his own role. Montgomery is a convincing "hero" with a fine clear voice and understandable diction much appreciated by the listeners last night.

Girdler Appeals 'Unfair' Decision By Labor Board

Philadelphia, April 18 (U.P.).—Republic Steel Corporation appealed to the United States Circuit Court today from a National Labor Relations Board decision holding the company guilty of violating the Wagner labor act, in connection with the strike of 60,000 workers last May.

The appeal, signed by Republic Board Chairman Tom W. Girdler, attacked constitutionality of the act, charged that the NLRB did not give the company a fair hearing, and that the board allowed "incompetent, immaterial and hearsay evidence."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) in the Coolidge Auditorium Monday night. Program: Quartet No. 2 (Bohuslav Martinu), Terzetto in C, Op. 74 (Antonin Dvorak), Quartet in E minor, "Z meho Zivota" (Bedrich Smetana).

Beginning a series of seven concerts which will be spaced on alternate days until the end of April, the Coolidge Quartet played last evening a program devoted to three Bohemian composers. The association was particularly appropriate inasmuch as Bohuslav Martinu has professed himself an ardent admirer of Dvorak and Smetana, and this statement is confirmed by the recognizable affinity between his music and that of his compatriot predecessors, disparate though his idiom is from theirs.

Had Martinu remained in his native land, it might well have been that a stronger national flavor would have permeated his music. But his interest in French impressionism drew him to Paris to study with Roussel, and the result of that submergence in a cosmopolitan city was an inevitable modification of his style. Moreover, he is a modernist in harmony and somewhat impatient with romanticism. His second quartet, composed in 1925, shows a divided allegiance.

The opening section of the first movement reflects Debussyan colors quite obviously, and the treatment of the entire allegro vivace is impressionistic. The second movement, however, is decidedly more personal and suffused with Czech spirit. This andante is thoughtful music, and the ideas are forcibly expressed. It is the strongest movement of the quartet, firmly constructed and logically cogent, yet animated by genuine poesy. The concluding allegro is a mixture of styles with a slight predominance of Czech rhythmic vitality.

Dvorak's Terzetto in C for two violins and viola is a work rarely heard for the probable reason that string trios have gone out of fashion. Its revival last evening was well worth while, for it abounds in that rhapsodic kind of poetry in which Dvorak excelled. The spontaneous flow of melody is matched by an untiring energy, and the music has a fine romantic glow. There is not a dull measure in the work, thanks to the honesty of the emotion and unsophisticated naturalness of the writing.

Smetana's autobiographical quartet in E minor is one of the saddest works in all musical literature despite the liveliness that dances through the greater part of its measures. Its nostalgia for the past is poignant, and throughout the music one is aware of the presage of tragedy.

Chemical Units Plan to Spend $100,000,000

Plant Outlay Arranged—'If the Industry Is Let Alone.'

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., April 18.—Plans of the $5,000,000,000 chemical industry, third largest in American manufacturing, to spend $100,000,000 in expansion of production plans were announced to the American Chemical Society here today.

They were given in a survey of chemistry's potential industrial power by Dr. D. P. Morgan, chemical and statistical expert, of New York City.

There is an "if," Dr. Morgan said, concerning the time when the hundred millions will be spent. "If" the chemical industry is let alone, this expansion will be within 18 months. Uncertainties about taxes and wages, he explained, are among causes of delay. Last year chemistry spent $100,000,000 on expansion, but at present has cut this spending rate to around 20 per cent.

Science, Dr. Morgan said, has enabled the chemical industry to top all other industries in economic progress. Wages in chemistry have averaged 4 per cent more rise than in 100 leading industries. Chemistry led all other industries in proportionate increase in putting men to work.

New profits in chemistry rose faster than in any other of 100 foremost American industries. Most of this extra rise occurred in those companies which spent the most money for scientific research. The excess for the chemical industry in profits above the average was 40.4 per cent.
